IF CHILD IS CROSS WON'T EAT

Take Doctor's Advice
Results Will Surprise You

If your precious child won't eat without coaxing, is nervous and underweight... do what doctors the world over advise. Give him a little Castoria and you will see a marked improvement the first day.
Authorities have found intestinal absorption of poisons to be the cause of most child ailments. Even when the child's habits may seem regular, poisons seep through the system and do damage. The stomach lapses. Food does not digest properly.
The nerves lose their delicate balance.
Nothing can correct this insidious condition quite as easily and naturally as Castoria. It tastes so good children beg for it. And it swiftly purges the little system of poisons. It settles the stomach, improves digestion and restores nerve-poise. Then Nature does the rest as only Nature
can. Appetite for food quickly returns. Health is restored to normal.
And as a result the child gains weight
fast and becomes sturdy and strong.
Now take care of your child this safe, drugless way. Get a bottle of Castoria and try it. Results will delight you.

Man In Major's Uniform:

MODEL

Gaol Sentence MASQUERADE AS PEER AND SINGAPORE DOCTOR

F. M. S. Judge As Patient On Ship
Made Love To Clergyman's Daughter

An Italian appeared the other day
in London on a new and rather peculiar type of cycle. This invention is called "Vallochio" and its owner maintains that it is far more comfortable than the ordinary type of cycle.

An astonishing story of a masquerade in major's uniform was told at Andover Police Court last month, when Richard Gerald Willoughby, described as of Upper Berkeley-street, London, appeared on summonses alleging that he had unlawfully worn a major's uniform and military decorations and medals at South Tidworth on August 3.

Both summonses were issued on information laid by Superintendent S. Bennett, of the Andover police.

The first alleged that he "did unlawfully wear certain military decorations and medals not being a person authorised so to do by the Army Council, contrary to section 13, Army (Annual) Act, 1919."

The second alleged that on August 3 "then being a person not serving in His Majesty's Forces, you did unlawfully wear without His Majesty's permis- sion the uniform of a major of the Royal Army Medical Corps contrary to section 2 of the Uniform Act."

He pleaded guilty to both summonses. On the first he was sentenced to three months' imprisonment. On the second he was fined £5.

Superintendent Bennett said that Willoughby arrived at Tidworth shortly after mid-day on August 3.

"He visited various units and came under particular notice about 4 o'clock when Lieut. Prince, Quartermaster at the Hospital, was watching a cricket match on the Royal Army Medical Corps ground."

"Willoughby drove up in a large car and alighted. He was dressed in the uniform of a major of the Royal Army Medical Corps. He wore field boots and a sword, and the decorations he wore were the Military Cross, the 1914-15 Star, the General Service medal, the Victory medal and the French Croix de Guerre."

"He was on the ground for three-quarters of an hour watching the cricket."

At The Officers' Mess
"He asked to be directed to the R.A.M.C. officers' mess. He was accompanied by Lieut. Prince, who offered refreshment which Willoughby accepted."

"He told Lieut. Prince that he was Major Willoughby, and that he had come down in connection with an outbreak of diphtheria at the camp. He also said there was a lot of tonsillitis about."

"He said he had come from Millbank, and that he occupied field officer's quarters there. Subsequently he went to the O.T.C. camp, and was entertained to dinner in the officers' mess."

"His manner became objectionable through his taking too much to drink. He was sent back to the military hospital and arrived there about 8.45. He was put on a sofa and went to sleep."

"By this time doubts had arisen as to his identity. In the Army list and the medical directory his name could not be found."

"He was not known at the Millbank officers' mess and it was decided to take him to the police station. He was seen by a sergeant, and was accused by Lieut.

Prince of unlawfully wearing officer's uniform.

"Struck Off"

"The police officer asked him about it, and he said he was Dr. Richard Gerald Willoughby, of Upper Berkeley-street, London, W., that he was a retired major of the Royal Army Medical Corps, and was entitled to wear uniform."

"Later he said, 'I cannot now call myself a doctor as my name has been struck off the Register. Strictly speaking, I am not entitled to wear uniform, but I have done no harm.'"

"He was, he said, entitled to wear the medals."

"Records at the War Office have been searched and no trace can be found of his having held a commission in the R.A.M.C. nor of the medals he was wearing."

Superintendent Bennett said that Willoughby was first known as Percy Seymour Kelly."

"In that name," added the superin- tendent, "he enlisted in the Duke of Cornwall's Light Infantry in Septem- ber, 1914. He was discharged as being- a deserter on being appointed to a temporary commission on Octo- ber 5. He was appointed second- lieutenant, 2nd Batt. Royal Fusiliers, on that date."

Removed From Army

"He changed his name by deed poll from Percy Seymour Kelly to Percy Seymour Willoughby on October 5, 1914. He resigned on October 5, 1914. He then enlisted as Robert O. Kelly in April 1915, and was discharged on being appointed to a commission on April 25, 1915."

"As Eric Patrick Cosmo Gordon of Kelly he was appointed to a tempo- rary commission for service in the in- fantry in April 1915."

"As Percy Seymour Kelly he served from July to October 1918, when he was discharged, with the rank of lance-corporal, as being no longer physically fit for war service."

"The first police record of this man was in the name of Percy Seymour Kelly, Morton Private Hotel, London. He posed as an officer of the Canadian Rifles. He obtained food and drink to the amount of £1 10s."

Posed As Clergyman

"He travelled about the country posing as a clergyman and visiting clergymen."

"On one occasion he actually preached a sermon."

"In September, 1914, he obtained a commission in the 2nd Royal Fusiliers and later was called on to resign be- cause of unsatisfactory conduct. He later joined the 16th Rifle Brigade as a private."

"Early in 1910 in the name of Willoughby, he stayed at the Great Central Hotel and posed as a rifleman in the County of London Regiment. A complaint was received then that he had obtained a clergyman's outfit from a firm at Salisbury without pay- ment and a warrant was issued."

Fingerprints From U.S.A.

"In 1914 fingerprints from Boston, U.S.A., were received in England from which it appears he had been charged with fraud and impersonating a British officer."

"He was sentenced to six months, and on his discharge was deported from America to England."

"On his return he became acquaint- ed with a clergyman. He made love to his daughter, aged 20, and so im- pressed him and the family that they agreed that he should marry her."

"Between June and August, 1919, in the name of Dr. Willoughby, he was in Scotland, posing as the nephew of a certain lord."

"He then absconded to Canada, where he posed as a doctor. In September, 1924, the police received notification from the Canadian police that he was being deported. He was sentenced to six months' imprison- ment and deported from Canada on August 4, 1924."

"On arrival in England he was arrested at Sheffield for obtaining a car without payment."

"He was sentenced to two months' hard labour for fraud. From this sentence he was released on February 25, 1925. In April of that year he was in Somerset with a woman travelling by car representing him- self as Dr. Willoughby of the Charing Cross Hospital."

"He obtained food and drink to the amount of £2 10s. and £2 in money."

"He was sentenced to six and three months' hard labour consecutively. Three other offences were taken into consideration on this occasion. When he was arrested he was posing as Captain Lionel Rufus Blinmore."

Coloured Doctor

"Before serving his sentence he had obtained a situation as a chartered accountant at a salary of over £1,000 a year. He received £200 for expenses, and when he was arrested he only had £10 8s. in his possession. It was evident he had no intention of taking up the situation."

"He was released from his sentence in April 1926, when he purchased a doctor's practice for £30 at Newington Green-road from a coloured doctor."

"He sold the drugs to a chemist, but did not pay over the purchase price."

"He posed at that time as Dr. Duff Brown. He advertised the practice for sale, and sold it for £50."

"Before the sale he restocked the dispensary, and to impress the doctor with the quantity of patients he obtained persons from the Labour Ex- change to fill his consulting room on the pretence that he wanted a male and a female clerk."

At Singapore

"He was next heard of at Panama, where he posed as Dr. Robert Penley Martin. His passport was issued in that name at Melbourne and bore visas for Florida, Virginia, Suez and other ports."

"It was also ascertained that in May 1931, in the name of Dr. Robert Penley Martin, he obtained an appointment as ship's surgeon from the Blue Funnel Line at Liverpool."

"He sailed under these conditions and, at one time went on a tour against the company's rules, and in- curred expenses amounting to £32 10s. against the company."

"On the return voyage he was landed at Singapore suffering from malaria fever. On his recovery the government of the Straits Settlements agreed to him, as Dr. Martin, exorbitant to England, a Judge who was ill."

Great Britain and Italy Manoeuvre Their Mediterranean Fleets

While the Ethiopian army battles with the invaders along the Italian frontiers Great Britain and Italy look to their naval power. Great Britain, at this stage, is decidedly interested but anxious spectator over Italy's fleet manoeuvres in the Mediterranean and near the Suez canal. The British have sent their ships of war to various strategic places along the Arabian coast where strong British fortresses are maintained for protection of the Suez Canal.

WOMAN SPENDS 27 YEARS IN A HOSPITAL

A Bradford woman who had been in hospital for twenty-seven years without a break has died. She was Mrs. Annie Lee and she was admitted to the St. Luke's Hospital in 1908 suffering from a painful illness. With the exception of a short period during the year when the hospital was used for wounded soldiers and she was transferred to the Bowling Institution, she remained there until her death. Up till ten years ago her husband visited her daily. Then he died in the same hospital. Two years ago Mrs. Lee saw a bus for the first time. She was being driven across the city for treatment at the Royal Eye and Ear Hospital.

Husband For Sale At £300 Cash

THERE have been cases of women who wanted to buy husbands, and men who have wanted to buy wives are fairly common.

But, surely, the strangest proposal is that of Mrs. Mary Ann Cordes, an Irish woman, who is offering her "husband for sale at £300 cash down."

And, stranger still, Mr. Cordes is quite agreeable although he says he is still in love with his wife!

The real trouble is that Mrs. Cordes is homesick. She is now in New York, states Reuter, but she wants to revisit her native Ireland to see her old mother.

If the "sale" should be effected, she means to spend the rest of her days in the Green Isle.

Up till now, however, all this has been only a dream.

The Cordes have been almost down and out for the last 10 years, and cannot raise the money for the third-class steamer fare.

Mr. Cordes, who is 40, entirely sympathises with his wife's longing for her native land. So far, however, no woman has made a bid for him.

"I'll Get Divorce"

"No young woman need apply," he stipulates. "She must be between thirty-five and forty-five, or even more."

"Young women are not worth their salt these days," he added.

"If I can find a woman, preferably one with a farm, who wants a good, steady husband, I'll get a Mexican divorce from Mary and marry again. Then Mary can go to Ireland and see her poor old mother."

"There must be plenty of lonely women who would appreciate a man like mine," Mrs. Cordes chimed in.

"I am doing this only for Mary," Mr. Cordes concluded. "She deserves a break."

"We have been married seventeen years, and somehow, after you've been down a very long time, you feel you can't go on the same old way any longer."

Skeleton May Solve Great Controversy COLLEGE FIND THEORY

Leicester, Sept. 30.

THE discovery of a skeleton in an ancient lead-lined coffin at Leicester may solve one of the great controversies of English history.

There is reasonable evidence for the belief that the skeleton is that of Richard III., who was killed at the Battle of Bosworth in 1485.

Fredric March, the famous American cinema star, who is spending a holiday in England before commencing his next work, "Anthony Adverse," is, as seen above, very occupied at his hotel in London signing autographs for numerous admirers.

NEW SCHEME ENDS THOSE WIFELY TEARS

HOW many tears has your wife shed because you forgot the date of your wedding anniversary or her birthday?

Now, if you lived in London, you would need have no further trouble in that direction. A London business man has formed an organisation which, for the sum of 6s. a year, guarantees to remind you of all birthdays and wedding anniversaries.

"I formed this organisation," he said, "because recently I forgot the date of expiry of my motor licence, so I tried to devise a means of reminding people of the things that matter in their lives. Already I have 6,000 clients on my book, but I am aiming at a million."

"One of the queerest requests I had was from a woman who wished to be reminded of 16 different appointments she had with her hairdresser."

"Reminders" is the name of the organisation, and its offices are in Bond-street.

If it should be proved to be his remains it will decide whether his appellation "Crookback" was simply a term of reproach or due to his being truly a hunchback.

Historians have crossed swords for years over this point.

Excavator Discovery

A huge mechanical excavator was at work on the site of the new wing at the Leicester College of Arts and Technology and this old coffin was suddenly revealed.

The Leicester Archaeology Society intend to investigate the matter closely. Many other skeletons have been found in the past few years in this neighbourhood during excavations on the college, but in each case the body had been buried without a coffin.

According to local theory, those skeletons were most likely monks or members of a collegiate brotherhood who lived there some five or six hundred years ago.

Registrar's Theory

The registrar of the college, Mr. Drury told me to-day:

"I am prepared to laugh at our conjectures in this matter, but there are a good many grounds for accepting the view that this skeleton may indeed be that of Richard III.

"Richard was killed at Bosworth, which is very near to this place. He was a young man—35 years old. He was of repulsive appearance, is understood to have been hunchbacked and to have a withered arm."

"Now the skull of this skeleton appears to be that of a man of repulsive appearance. He was obviously of low mentality. The forehead is low and the underjaw protrudes beyond the upper one by about a quarter of an inch."

"About 200 yards from the spot there is a bridge upon which a plate records the fact: 'Near this spot lie the remains of King Richard III., who was killed at Bosworth Field.'

"It is generally understood by historians that the King's body was brought on horseback from Bosworth and flung into the river here."

"Our conjecture is that the news of the fate of the King would certainly reach the members of the brotherhood who lived here. They would very likely recover the body from the river and bury it within the precincts of the church."

Super-Slayer, or Boasting Ananias? SPATE OF "CONFESSIONS"

Twenty-one years old and a murderer twenty-seven times over. That's the self-accused record of a Californian lad, Earl Cramer. Either the world's most colossal liar or the world's most cold-blooded assassin. Which is he—Super Assassin or Super Ananias?

When arrested (August 25) he proposed to tell two or three thrillers—a day to the police until he had made a clean breast of his mania to kill.

The bodies of two men were found at once—35-year-old James C. Kennett, of Chicago, whom Cramer said he killed in a quarrel over food, and John Thomas Mangan, aged 17, of Sacramento, whom he knifed and shot because the red-haired youth had borrowed his rifle.

Then Cramer sent searchers back to the same spot, where a giant former sailor had lived as a hermit while seeking gold and radium, to hunt for the bodies of Fred Realing, mine watchman, who disappeared last November, and John Johnson, an aged prospector, who dropped out of sight in July.

"I didn't like the people around me," Cramer told the authorities. "You go find those bodies, and then I'll tell you some more. If you look in old prospecting holes you'll find men buried everywhere."

Son Of A Barber

Unless this boastful young Bluebeard gave searchers the right directions their task of finding Realing's and Johnson's bodies appear almost insurmountable.

The place (a mining district called Fuida Flats) is dotted with scores of abandoned mines.

In one of them Kennett's body lay since last July until Cramer's confession told where it could be found.

Mangan's body was found accidentally by a cattle man in search of rustlers.

When telling of killing Realing and Johnson, Cramer, the son of a San Francisco barber, boasted of slaying a man named Jeff Baughman, at Loomis, California, in 1933, and a youth in a California C.C.C. camp last year.

The authorities appear to doubt the story of Baughman's death. They say he was not as certain of the details as he had been in confessing to the murder of Kennett and Mangan and in telling where he had buried the bodies of Realing and Johnson.

Cramer's intimation that the list of his victims will reach 27 was made to a deputy-sheriff. The district attorney does not believe it.

In his cell after his confession Cramer read eagerly every word published about his exploits in every newspaper that was available. He delighted in the stories of his confessed cruelties.

A Cattle Rustler

This young man presents a puzzling personality. Although he professes to prefer his own company to that of his fellow-men, he often shared his cabins and his food, or their cabins and their food, with other prospectors for Californian gold.

Kennett he met on a freight train, and invited him to scratch for gold with him. The red-haired Mangan he also met while wandering about.

His reasons for killing his friends are trivial. He says he shot Kennett and slashed the body with a knife in a dispute over the division of food after they had decided to separate.

Mangan died because he had borrowed Cramer's rifle without permission.

He quarrelled with Realing over a dog.

He accused Johnson and Realing of snooping around a radium and gold mine which he said he had located. There are no known deposits of radium, however, in the area.

The police place little credence in the fantastic "werewolf" angle to the youth's confession as to the killing of calves and drinking their warm blood.

Cramer was arrested originally for theft of cattle. It was while ranchers were seeking missing calves that Mangan's body was found, when the killing was traced to Cramer. Then the astounding confession began to flow from the braggart youth.

OBITUARY

DEATH OF FAMOUS POLITICIAN

Paris, Oct. 5. M. Henry de Jouvenel, a member of the French Senate and Ambassador to Italy in 1933 as well as a member of several Cabinets, was found unconscious in Champs Elysee last night. He was taken to hospital where he died shortly after, apparently from heart failure. Reuter.

Henry de Jouvenel was born in Paris in April, 1876. He went in for journalism and eventually became editor of the Matin, a position in which he exercised a strong influence on politics. In 1921 he was elected to the Senate as representative of the Corrèze Department, where he owned property. He was also one of the French delegates to the League of Nations in 1922, 1924 and 1925.

Syrian Revolt Recalled

In November, 1925, he was appointed High Commissioner in Syria in succession to General Sarrail, who was recalled as the result of the Druses' revolt and especially for his action in bombarding Damascus. Before taking up his post, M. Jouvenel visited London to discuss the delimitation of the frontier between Syria and the British mandated territories. While prepared to use force, if necessary, he preferred negotiation.

He set up legislative assemblies in three of the four Syrian States, but the revolt of the Jebel Druses continued and their peace conditions included full independence for Syria and the withdrawal of all French troops. De Jouvenel refused these demands. In April 1926, the French forces seized Souaida, the capital of the Druses, and one month after, Meidan, a suburb of Damascus was bombarded, about 1,000 people being killed.

Before the Mandates Commission of the League in June, de Jouvenel defended this action as necessary to prevent the invasion of the city by rebels who had lodged in Meidan. Having restored order, he resigned in the autumn and returned to the Matin. Later he again acted as delegate to the League, but resigned in August 1927 as he was dissatisfied with its methods. While he held that nothing but that body could solve the problems of Europe, he considered that it had been lethargic and that drastic reforms were needed.

He favoured disarmament and economic collaboration which allow the States to lower their tariffs. But, while protesting in December 1928 against France's swollen armaments, he declared that her occupation of the left bank of the Rhine was the only guarantee for the stability of Europe. Jouvenel's wife is the well known novelist, Colette.

The funeral of the late Mrs. Miriam Gordon took place very quietly yesterday afternoon. Christian Science rites were observed,

THE SILENT GUIDE TO HONG KONG.

WHAT IT IS: The "Silent Guide" consists of a large illuminated street map of Hong Kong (18 feet by 6 feet). The map, which is coloured, is painted on a ground glass background, behind which are over 6,000 small lamps. At a convenient distance from the large map is a small switchboard containing a number of six inch glass panels for subscribers' names, addresses and telephone numbers, each with its own button switch.

WHERE IT WILL BE: At the entrance to the Star Ferry Wharf (Hong Kong side) where it will be seen by 90% of the tourists and other visitors arriving at Hong Kong, besides the many thousands of residents who make daily use of the Star Ferry on their way to and from business.

WHAT IT WILL DO: If anyone wishes to find the location of an office, hotel, theatre, bank, shop or other business in Hong Kong. He goes to the switchboard where he finds the names of subscribers, properly classified and arranged alphabetically. He presses the appropriate button and the subscriber's name on the panel board immediately lights up. At the same time, on the large street map, a coloured lamp will show the exact position of the office or shop, etc., he is looking for, and the quickest route will also be indicated by lighting up the road to be taken right the way from the Star Ferry to his destination. Bus and tram routes will be shown by special coloured lamps. Subscribers' names will be in Chinese as well as English if desired, and an attendant will be stationed at the switchboard to give assistance to strangers if required.

PUT YOURSELF ON THE MAP!

and Mr. O. Hallburn, First Reader, conducted the service in the chapel of the Church of England in the Protestant Cemetery, Happy Valley, after which the remains were cremated at the Japanese crematorium. The deceased was en route with her daughter, Miss Verna Gordon, to Tientsin, and was admitted to the Grail Hospital, Saiyong, suffering from bacillary dysentery and passed away on September 28, at the age of 65. The body was brought to Hong Kong by her daughter, arriving here on Saturday morning on the s.s. Marechal Joffre. The chief mourner at the funeral yesterday was Miss Verna Gordon. Among those present were Mr. and Mrs. W. Baxter, Mrs. P. Sharpham, Mrs. O. Hallburn, Miss M. G. Clarke, Messrs. J. C. Salgan, W. Karley, H. R. Middleton, and A. G. L. Baxter.

SALES OF WORK

TWO VERY SUCCESSFUL FUNCTIONS HELD

Two successful sales of work were held on Saturday, one in aid of the Hongkong Society for the Protection of Children, at the Quarry Bay School, North Point, and the other held by the Women's Guild Section of the Kowloon Union Church in the Church Hall. The former was opened by Lady MacGregor, and the latter by Mrs. J. R. Higgins.

The programme at Quarry Bay School commenced with a Drill Display after which Lady MacGregor officially declared the sale open and she was delighted with the display, the stalls and the students' efforts to help the Society.

Lady MacGregor then distributed prizes to the following successful students:
Class 7A: 1st Prize, Elinor Moffat; 2nd Prize, James Saunders; Homework Prize, Jacqueline Kew.
Class 7B: 1st Prize, Margaret Hume.
Class 8A: 1st Prize, Lionel Strango.
Class 8B: 1st Prize, Michael Proulx.
Class 9: 1st Prize, Dennis Padgett.
Progress Prizes: Ian Finnie and Leslie Giles.

The following persons were in charge of the various stalls:
Morning Coffee: Mrs. Phillips.
Tea Stall: Mesdames Wallace, Swan, the Misses G. Bone, J. Summers, and J. Fraser.

Cold Drinks: Misses D. Young, P. Pollock, and A. Weir.
Gold Fish Competition Stall: Master A. Keown.
Bucket Quits: Miss Mona Shand.
Shooting Competition: Mr. Dunlop, Mr. Hill.
Stalls representing Japan, Peiping and Swatow: Mrs. Grey and Mrs. Jeffrey.
Bran Tub: Mr. Swan.

Ice-cream Stall: Masters J. Wald, B. Keown.
Sweet Stall: Mrs. Jeffrey, the Misses R. Stokes and J. Wallace.
Drilling Display: Miss Roger.
Mr. G. R. Sayer, Director of Education, and Mrs. Sayer were among those who attended the sale.

At Kowloon
As a result of the sale of work at the Kowloon Union Church, the funds have been augmented by over $500. There were many attractive stalls containing a wide range of goods.

Stallholders were: Sweet Stall, Mesdames Thomson and Watson; Home Produce Stall, Mesdames Taylor and Blue; Tea, Mesdames Harrison, Wu, Murray, Walter, Murray, Sellwood, Martin, and Mitchell; Bran-tub, Mesdames McEllan and Spittles; Ice Cream Stall, the Misses McCaw; Woolen Stall, Mesdames Gray and Buchanan; Novelty Stall, Mesdames Scott, Powell and

THREE SNATCHERS

ALL GIVEN DETERRENT SENTENCES

Three cases of snatching came before Mr. Macfadyen at the Central Police Court on Saturday.

Li Piu, 21, unemployed, admitted the attempted theft of a black leather handbag from a woman, Yiu Fan, at Douglas Lane near the Queen's Theatre on Friday night. Detective-Sergeant Shepherd stated that the woman had just alighted with a small child from a tram car near the General Post Office when defendant came from the opposite direction and bumped into her. He made an attempt to pull the handbag from her hand but was unsuccessful. The woman fell, and injured her left elbow slightly.

Sentence of four months' hard labour with twelve strokes of the birch was passed. If the man is unfit for birching he is to undergo an additional two months' hard labour.

Watchman Complimented

An Indian watchman was complimented by the magistrate for his arrest of Cheng Siu-yim, 19, unemployed, who pleaded guilty to the theft of a handbag from a woman, Ng Wah-ching, 22, in Jervois Street. Acting Sub-Inspector Smith stated that the bag contained $13 in Chinese money and some private papers. Four months' hard labour was imposed.

A similar sentence was passed on Ng Tai, 28, wharf coolie, who admitted stealing a leather wallet containing Hongkong and Chinese money, the property of Tsang Lin, a conductor employed in the Kowloon Motor Bus Company.

Acting Sub-Inspector Smith stated that the complainant was coming off the s.s. Yuet On at the Tung On Wharf carrying chairs when he felt a tug at his pocket. He looked round and saw the defendant make off with his purse. He did not shout as he was afraid the man might throw the purse into the harbour. The complainant kept watch on defendant and saw him place the purse in a cockle on the wharf.

The health bulletin of Eastern ports for the week ended September 28 shows the following cases of infectious diseases: Plague:—Rangoon 1 case, Colombo 2 cases, Calcutta 17 cases, Cebu 8 deaths, Madras 8 cases, Bangkok 12 cases, Small-pox:—Bombay 5 cases, Madras 2 cases, Negapatam 2 cases, Tuticorin 1 case, Vizagapatam 1 case.

THE NEW STUDEBAKER

"DICTATOR" SALOON

"Expressions of a Noted Authority in all matters pertaining to motoring"

Sir Malcolm Campbell's opinion of the 1935 MIRACLE RIDE STUDEBAKER given in his article which appeared recently in "The Field" concludes with—

"Altogether, I consider the New Studebaker a very good car indeed. Quiet at all speeds, very smooth and easy to handle, quite fast on the level—70 m.p.h. is well within its compass—good on hills and with excellent acceleration on all gears. It impresses me as being excellent value in the £300—£350 class. It is a car that I think will appeal to a very wide section of British motorists."

BRITAIN'S NAVAL POLICY

Despite official denials of London press reports that Britain contemplates a big programme of new naval construction, there can be little doubt that plans to this end are under serious consideration. The situation created by Japan's opposition to the ratio system, coupled with the indications that there is small prospect of a new naval conference being held this year, would appear to dictate the necessity of Britain taking every possible step to increase her naval strength. It is now generally conceded that, anxious to prevent a costly armaments race, Britain has permitted the effectiveness of her Navy to become seriously undermined. The British Government had hoped that it would have been possible to reassemble the Naval Conference this year, and some weeks ago sounded the other leading naval powers regarding the prospects of such a course. Provision for such a conference was made in the London Naval Treaty of 1930, which, with the Washington Naval Treaty, is due to expire at the end of the present year. Thus it was considered that, during 1935, the situation should be considered with a view to reducing naval armaments still further, if possible. Unhappily, there is small likelihood of this hope being realised. It was only a few weeks ago that the British Admiralty made proposals the adoption of which, it was hoped, would at least mitigate the costs and risks of an unchecked race in naval armaments. Perhaps the proposals were too simple to have produced any real effect. They were to the effect that the chief naval countries should be asked to lay on the table their building programmes for several years ahead, and that at the October conference an attempt should be made to draw up some kind of treaty, with pledges not to exceed the announced programmes. From the start there were doubts as to whether such a scheme would work, and in particular it was felt that there would have to be an "escalator" clause enabling the parties to denounce the treaty at any time. With the outlook thus, it was feared that countries, in announcing their naval requirements, would be tempted to over-estimate them, thus leading to further over-estimates on the part of the others. It is now clear that there will be no conference this month, if at all during the current year. Those who want to see peace preserved cannot but regret the fate of the London and Washington Treaties, which represented one of the few real pieces of genuine disarmament since the Great War. Unless something can be put in their place, the cost to taxpayers everywhere will be heavy, and the loss in international security even more serious. In the circumstances, however, Britain cannot be blamed for determining to see to it that her own safety is not jeopardised by increased building on the

NOTES OF THE DAY

LIBERALS' FUTURE

As a General Election approaches, many Liberals must be asking themselves what their future is to be. If their policy be one of rigid non-co-operation with either the Government or the Socialists, it is a future that is bound to be blank enough. On the other hand, is there any sound reason, or are their sufficient reasons, why they should hold aloof and thereby condemn themselves to futility in the business of governing the country? asks the Edinburgh Dispatch. The question is examined candidly and impartially by Sir Alfred H. Watson, from the point of view of those who have a tradition of Liberalism over several generations in their families. He finds that tariff policy is almost the sole obstacle to assisting the Government. But many Liberals, bowing to the march of events, and recognising that Cobdenite principles have no perpetual applicability, have already found that tariffs are no obstacle to co-operation. It may be easy enough to point to one or two respects in which the country is not better off under fiscal reform than under Free Trade; but the situation must be judged as a whole, and when that is done it will be admitted that this country has made more substantial progress along the path of industrial and commercial recovery than any other.

EMPLOYMENT FIGURES

The latest returns of employment emphasise that point. The tariff system, moreover, is adaptable and elastic, modifiable where necessary. It is a matter of business rather than one of politics. That is as it should be. Liberals will have to make up their minds. The independent section of their party continues to be divided into various factions, the reunion of which appears to be beyond hope. There is no commanding voice that all will rally to support. And if, at any future date, the electors should allow the pendulum to swing, it will assuredly not be to Liberalism. The issue is between Socialism and that system of sound husbandry for which the supporters of the present Government, be they Unionist, Liberal, or Socialist, stand. The Independent Liberals, by pursuing their present course, condemn themselves to what Sir Alfred Watson calls spending the remainder of their lives in the sterility of opposition.

A SIGN OF GRACE

An unusually large number of American film stars of both sexes have been visiting this country during recent months, and it now appears that besides the holiday-making urge that sends so many Americans to Europe they have had a more serious purpose, namely the learning of the English language. That is a sign of grace. Even in the United States there seems to be an increasing conviction that the American accent as it is frequently heard on the film leaves room for improvement. Here it has lost its novelty and, except among small boys, has ceased to fascinate. Several of the more prominent American stars rub down the edges of their speech, presumably with a view to making the best of both worlds, namely, the New and the Old. And the increasing popularity of British films in the United States, a reward of their improving merit, has been doing some good propaganda work in favour of English as it is spoken on this side of the Atlantic. The British market is too profitable for Hollywood to ignore, and as British competition grows we may expect the American magnates to pay more and more attention to our needs and preferences, instead of adopting an attitude of take-it-or-leave-it. This looks like improving the tone of the screen in a new sense.

part of the others. It is now clear that there will be no conference this month, if at all during the current year. Those who want to see peace preserved cannot but regret the fate of the London and Washington Treaties, which represented one of the few real pieces of genuine disarmament since the Great War. May Hold Secret of Peace for Abyssinia

Scarcely a hundred miles in length—but it saves Italian vessels an extra journey of 8,000 miles. A view down the length of the Suez Canal—which might conceivably be closed as a means of separating Italy and Abyssinia.

"If Italy wants to go to war Turkish War in 1877. In a despatch with Ethiopia," it has been said of May 6 of that year the suggested in many quarters, "let British Government warned her. But there's no reason why Russia that it would regard any she should use the Suez Canal attempt to interfere with the for the purpose. An embargo on the Russian Government re-arms to both countries equally plied that it would not injure the—now place an embargo on the canal in any way.

In the Spanish-American War the Egyptian Government allowed the Spanish fleet on the way to Manila to coal at the canal only after it promised to return to Spain. In the Russo-Japanese War of 1904 the British Government allowed Russian warships to go through the canal in spite of the fact that they were on their way to fight Japan, Britain's ally. Italian warships passed through the canal during the Italian-Turkish War of 1911 in spite of the fact that Egypt was then part of Turkey. At the outbreak of the world war the British military command issued an order that no enemy vessel was to enter the canal. Although Turkey contended this was a violation of the Convention of 1888, British authorities justified it—on the ground of defending the canal.

The closing of the canal, if effectively carried out, would make it almost impossible for a country in the position of Italy to carry on war in Abyssinia.

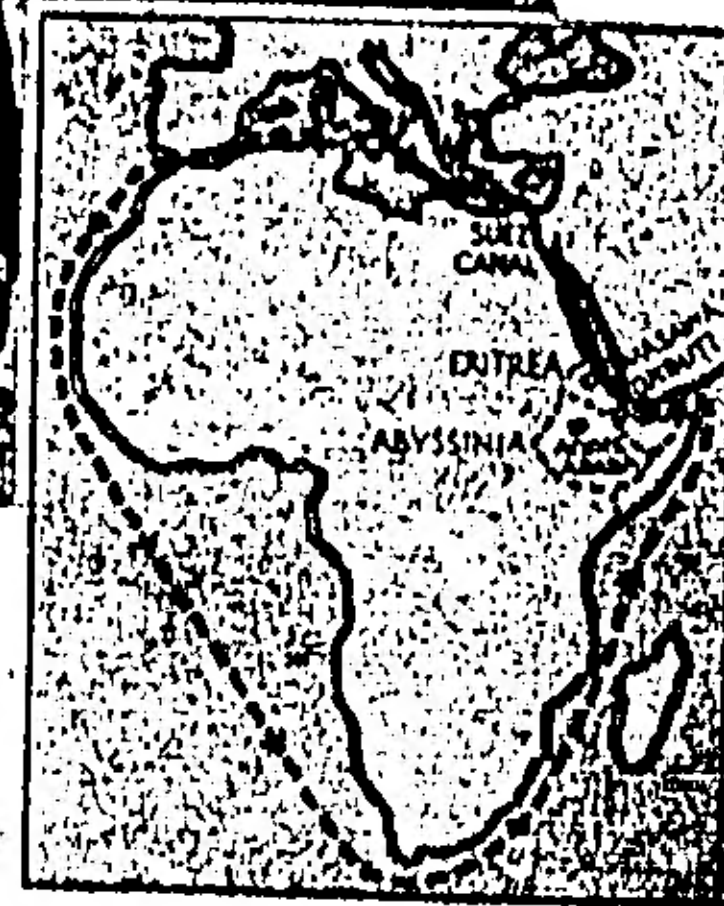

Instead of having a journey of 2,000 miles for her troops, for her supplies, and for her sick and wounded, she would be faced with a journey of about 10,000 miles to be carried out round the whole of Africa, and it is doubtful whether any coaling stations would be available for her vessels on the way. In any case, the cost of warfare under such conditions would be impossible.

A study published by the Geneva Research Centre in co-operation with the Foreign Policy Association, examines the question whether the League of Nations may close the Suez Canal to an aggressor State.

Written by Mr. Raymond Leslie Buell, president of the Foreign Policy Association, the study declares that there may be room for disagreement upon the following points:—

1. In the Convention of 1888, providing that the canal shall "always be free to every vessel of commerce or of war," in and open in time of war to every vessel of commerce or of war, "in force to-day?"
2. Does the British Government have legal jurisdiction over the canal?
3. Does the League Covenant supersede the Convention of 1888 in so far as the two are incompatible?
4. In 1882 British forces were landed at Ismailia and closed the canal for several days. During the Franco-German War of 1870 the warships of both belligerents passed through the canal freely, Egypt, instead of Great Britain, but a critical condition arose upon the outbreak of the Russo-

SHOULD the Council proceed to authorise the British Government to close the canal under Article XX. of the Covenant, it might be open to the Italian Government to challenge such action before the Permanent Court under the optional clause. The Italian Government could contend that the Convention of 1888 was still in force and that passed through the canal freely, Egypt, instead of Great Britain, but a critical condition arose upon the outbreak of the Russo-

Two—or 10,000 Miles?

This map shows plainly what the use of the Suez Canal means to Mussolini. The bold line is the course his troops take at present. The broken line shows how they would have to go if the canal were closed.

It's Better To Be Cramped For Space Than To Have Cramp In Your Wrist

MR. Kelly, the eminent journalist, is not at all put out about having only two-thirds of a column in to-day's issue of the Telegraph. In fact, he would have filled it up with one paragraph if the Editor hadn't caught him bribing the linotypist to set his only copy in the largest type available.

"Be staccato," said the Editor to us, when he told us the set-up man had left us only a part of a column in which to fit our pearls of wit.

We don't know what staccato means, but it sounds like the stuff they use to chuck on the walls of buildings so that the cockroaches and rats can get a grip for their toes when they're climbing up to the rafters. If it's not that, it's the stuff they feed the Italian troops on.

"Slavery still exists in Ethiopia, but Mussolini is sure doing his best to wipe it out."—Staccato Joke No. 1.

League of Nations should have a radio police force. Then when these dictators started playing up like Muss, they could be brought to heel with—"Calling all Czars, Calling All Czars."—Staccato Joke No. 2.

"As they march, the huge black Eritrean soldiers chant, 'Mussolini for ever. The white whippers of Selassie will make a break to polish the shoes of Mussolini.'"

Muss, is going to make a mess Of Lion of Judah's mount.

To which the Lion replied, "Oh, yes? Well, if Muss, must he must."

See by Saturday's paper that Italy has called for volunteers in the United States. Now that all the war baby class have been called up for service, there's only the boys in their teens left to join. Following is suggested stirring appeal (thought up, free of charge, by famous Hongkong writer) and passed on to modern Caesar for what it is worth:

"Friends, Romans, countrymen! Lend me your heirs!"

Editor's comment: List of impassioned appeal cluttered by beer stains. Eddie's comment: Doesn't matter. Our column is also full.

Mr. Edward Kelly has much pleasure in accepting the kind invitation of the Chairman and Board of Directors of the Hongkong & Shanghai Banking Corporation to the Opening of their new shack along the Road. AMERICA'S OLYMPIC TRIALS

SELECTION OF A SUITABLE SITE

TRACK AND FIELD ATHLETES

Chicago, Oct. 6.
The American Olympic Track and Field Committee has announced selection of the new $2,500,000 stadium on Randall's Island, N. Y., as the scene of final tryouts for the 1936 Olympic track and field team. The trials will be held on July 10 and 11, 1936.

Other bids were received from Chicago, Dallas, Philadelphia, and Princeton University, William J. Bingham, chairman, who was named manager of the squad, announced. The new invitation was selected on condition that the stadium be completed and suitably equipped.

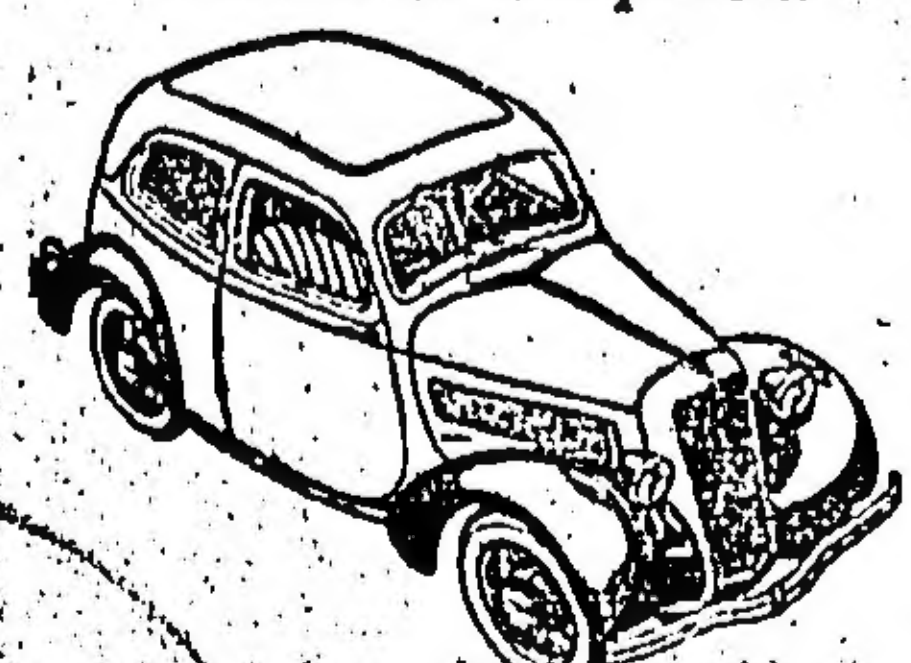

For the fourth consecutive year, Lawson Robertson of the University of Pennsylvania was named coach of the team. He will be assisted by T. Nelson-Melcaro, University of Chicago, and Dean Crowell, University of Southern California. Bingham's assistants will be Edwin F. Schaefer, Buffalo, New York; Joseph T. England, Baltimore; Maryland; and A. Musters, Leland Stanford University, California.

Regional trials will be held early next summer.—United Press.

Plymouth Argyle's search for an outside right ended recently with the transfer, at a substantial fee, of Bernard Oxley, from Sheffield Wednesday, and formerly of Sheffield United and Chesterfield. Argyle have also signed for extensive trials Charles Lennon, a half-back from St. James Gate, Dublin, and Jack Green, right half, from a Lancashire junior club.

CHINESE AWAY

CURTAINED PROGRAMME FOR WEEK-END

(By "Sagax")

CHINA'S National Games which commence in Shanghai on Thursday next have attracted the majority of the local Chinese footballers and during the past week the South China and Chinese Athletic players went North to represent the Colony and Canton during the week.

As a result of the absence of these teams from the Colony only a curtailed programme of matches was carried out over the week-end.

WHERE do the Chinese football fans go on a Saturday afternoon when their favourite teams are away from the Colony?

CHINESE supporters of the game their interest almost entirely to the activities of the South China and Chinese Athletic Associations.

At a rough computation these two clubs between them attract as many spectators as all the other teams put together.

THE Royal Navy and the Army, during the past two seasons, have erected stands which will now accommodate something like 5,000 spectators each. By no stretch of the imagination can it be said that these improvements and enlargements were made to accommodate their own supporters.

MATCHES between two foreign teams never attract the spectators in the same way as a game in which a Chinese team is engaged. On Saturday last when there were only foreign teams playing the stands were almost deserted in comparison with the crowds which were seen at the games of the previous week.

SURPRISE WIN

ST. JOSEPH'S SECURE ANOTHER VICTORY

IN striking contrast to the heavy scoring of the previous week, only three goals were recorded by the six teams which were engaged in First Division football on Saturday, the East Lancashire Regiment claiming two against Kowloon and St. Joseph's netting once against the Club.

IT would seem that the surprise team of the season is going to be the St. Joseph's eleven although it is yet too early to take their present position at the top of the league seriously.

AGAINST the Kowloon Football Club last week the Collegians won by six goals to one but the Peninsula side are last year's wooden-spoonists and they look likely to continue hovering round the bottom of the league.

HOWEVER, last Saturday's feat against the Club has marked the St. Joseph's Football Club as a potential force in the local league this season and if they are not among the leading teams at the end of the season they should not fail to give a good account of themselves in their different matches.

ON paper the eleven are nothing like as formidable as when they were runners-up to the South Wales Borderers three seasons ago but they have some promising recruits. Garbachean Singh, who was in the Radio team in the Second Division last season, is showing improved form in the higher class and is making an ideal leader for his new team.

AGE WINS AGAINST YOUTH

TONY CANZONERI BEATS AL ROTH

BUT CHAMPION ON DECLINE

New York, Oct. 5.
Age against youth was the theme for the lightweight boxing championship bout over fifteen rounds at Madison Garden to-night in which Tony Canzoneri defeated Al Roth on points.

Canzoneri, the thirty year old champion of the light-weights has showed up considerably since he regained the title early in May of this year. Although he hasn't lost any battles since he earned the decision over Lou Ambers, he has not defended his title, since all bouts were over the weight.

Experts who have seen Tony in his latest fights say that the spring has gone from his legs and the dynamite from his fists. His long ring career which covers half his life, is nearing its end.

Although this has been heard before, it seems more likely to be true now. The boy just goes on fighting for the love of it. The money he has earned would comfortably retire him on his farm for the rest of his life. It cannot be that he is looking for more glory because he has more than his share with titles as light-weight, junior welterweight, and feather-weight champion.

THE CHALLENGER

Al Roth, unsuccessful challenger, has just passed his twenty-second birthday and has been fighting for four years. In his last two fights he upset two of the best lightweights in the business. First, it was Lenard Del Genio, the hard hitting former golden-gloves champion. Then, with the right to challenge for the lightweight title at stake he defeated the 1-1 favourite Davey Day, the Illinois Boxing Commission's No. 1 challenger.

He has come through his four years of fighting without being knocked out once. In this forty-fights, his four losses can be directly attributed to a hand injury which prevented him from delivering his famous left hook. Last year his manager ordered an operation performed on the bruised sinews in the back of his left hand, and since then the hand has been perfect.

Since his operation he has reversed two of the decisions against him and the other two fighters have refused to meet him.

Both Canzoneri and Roth are the same type of fighters, clever boxers, and men that carry a punch in both hands. Bobby Pacho, the Mexican lightweight, had Tony on the floor at Chicago in July, and Pacho is a light hitter as compared to Al Roth, who after a training session at Madison, N.J. last month, was in the ring to-night's fight after a training session at Summit, N.J. for nearly a month.—United Press.

covered from saving first time. When the Fusiliers goalkeeper caught the ball he appeared to have drawn it into the goal before throwing it out. When charged by the referee was near the middle of the field and was unopposed.

McHardy, the police custodian, was very safe and saved many difficult shots.

The match was played at a fast and furious pace throughout and some good healthy football was seen.

FOOTBALL PUZZLE OF INSURANCE

CASUALTIES IN THE GAME

(By Frank M. Carruthers)

London, Sept. 9.
Though the football season in England has been running only a week a problem has arisen which is causing the authorities great concern.

At the meeting of the League Management Committee at Portsmouth on Saturday steps were taken to straighten out the complicated legal position which has occurred in regard to the insurance of players.

There are 'four men' at present whose claims for compensation for injuries which have compelled their retirement from the game cannot be met. It has been legally decided that they are no longer 'workmen' and are not entitled to compensation at the maximum rate of 30s. a week.

The authorities are the trustees of the insurance fund subscribed by the clubs. Until the clubs sanction compensation to players who have been placed outside the scheme by the legal decision, the authorities must withhold payments if claimed.

GRANT TO PLAYER

The position is to be explained to the clubs, who I have no doubt, will rectify it. Meanwhile, a compassionate grant has been made to one of the players.

The whole question of insurance is hedged round with legal difficulties. One which it is felt must be decided, is the age limit of a player's career. A man of 32 commands the same compensation as one ten years younger, and it has never been laid down at what age it can be said that he has ceased to retain his playing qualifications.

The amount disbursed to injured players is about £20,000 a year, the clubs contributing one per cent. of

CLUB DE RECREIO AND LINCOLNS DRAW

WEAKENED PORTUGUESE SIDE DEFEND STUBBORNLY AGAINST SOLDIERS

(By "Sagax")

Lincolnshire 0 Club de Recreio 0

Lincolns:—Reed; Edmundson and Ash; Thompson, Deeming and Robson; Clayton, Malpas, Higgins, Ridley and Baldry.

Club de Recreio:—Marques; Maher and Bowen; Fernandes, Delgado and V. Marques; Goncalves, Castilho, Campos and Alves.

Football that was never worthy of two teams participating in the top class in the Colony, was served up by the Lincolnshire Regiment and the Club de Recreio at Sookunpoo on Saturday afternoon when the weakened Portuguese side rather covered themselves with glory by holding the soldiers to a goalless draw.

Three reserves were introduced into the Club de Recreio team, the Gosano brothers being absentees while N. Beltrao, the captain, was also away. The brothers are on the injured list, following the previous week's match against the Police but they hope to be available again next Saturday.

Campos (at centre-forward), Fernandes (right half) and Maher (right back) were drawn from the second division to deputise for the absentees.

Malpas was introduced into the forward line in the place of Turner in the Lincolnshire side while Thompson came into the side at half back to enable Edmundson to partner Ash at back.

OPPORTUNITIES GO BEGGING

Indecision on the part of the Lincolnshire forwards when marked by the opposition defenders allowed many openings to go begging and it was due to their inability to take full advantage of all opportunities that the soldiers failed to secure both points after they had had almost all of the play.

The combination among the five forwards on the military side was good up to a point. When the ball had been manoeuvred to a favourable spot one or the other of the attackers would allow himself to be robbed or would relay a pressing situation by heading wide.

The principal contributory factor to the soldiers' failures was the stout defence which the Portuguese put up against a rather slow moving forward line. To cope with the difficulties the Portuguese were able to their gate receipts for the purpose.

There are too many injuries in the game. On Saturday Blair, the Aston Villa back, fractured a bone in his leg and Dean, the Everton centre forward, broke a toe.

Blair's accident occurred in a collision with an opponent and it was remarkable that he continued to play for ten minutes. The presumptions was that the injury was aggravated by remaining on the field.

But a suggestion that the accidents are due to rough play is a very unfair reflection on the players. I have already seen six matches and there has not been a deliberate foul in one of them.

advantage under which the visitors were playing in being without the services of star men, the Recreio adopted an entirely defensive policy and had their three half backs assisting the defence to the exclusion of the forwards and it was necessary for the Portuguese attack to drop back for the ball to initiate any movement.

On several occasions the forwards broke away and became an instant source of danger to the Lincolnshire defence but except for a few occasions the half backs were able to subvert all attacks. When necessary the full backs were always prepared for an emergency and there were intended few opportunities given the Portuguese, although three or four times the visitors went very near to scoring a surprise goal.

DETERMINED DEFENCE

The determined defence which was put up by the Recreio side was due in no small measure to the safety of R. Marques in goal and to the brilliance of Bowen at left back. The latter was the outstanding player on the field and was always an obstacle to the Lincolnshire attack.

There was only one occasion when he was really beaten and then Malpas misjudged his shot for goal, allowing Marques to save without difficulty.

The half backs, inspired by the stubborn bowen, concentrated entirely on defence and rendered invaluable support to the backs. They lay well back and gave the opposition few openings. They were always able to nip in and clear every time Higgins and Co. approached within reach of goal. More often than not the ball was cleared to a Lincolnshire man but the Recreio forwards received several nips from which they moved quickly down the line only to be stopped by the defenders.

Ash and Edmundson were always reliable, and gave little away, the former being particularly sound. Reed, in goal, was never given a really serious time although one or two shots went near to being converted. Campos, towards the end of the game missed an open goal in the same way as Malpas had missed scoring for the Lincolns early in the first half.

Taken all round the game was scrappy and never reached a high standard of play. The football that was seen was certainly not a credit to the twenty-two players although there were one or two bright spots during the match.

BRITISH VICTORY IN S. AFRICA

ANOTHER DOUBLE FOR HOWLAND

Pretoria, Sept. 11.
The Oxford and Cambridge team of athletes, who are touring the Union, won another match here to-day, when they met the Transvaal and South African police in a triangular contest. The tourists won by one point from the Transvaal, with 13 points against 12. The South African police scored 5.

R. L. Howland (Cambridge University), captain of the British team, won the shot putt with 40ft. 10½in. and the discus with 120ft. 6½in. He has so far won every event during the tour in which he has competed.

E. Grimbeck, the South African sprint champion, won the 100yds. and 220yds. in 0.8sec. and 21.4-sec. respectively.

A. G. K. Brown, the Cambridge University quarter-mile, beat A. W. Sweeney, the British Empire sprint champion, in the 100yds. and an Olympic runner, by 30yds.

Another English defeat was recorded in the pole vault, when J. Van Der Walt, of the police, vaulted 12ft. 9½in. to 12ft. by F. R. Webster, of Cambridge University, the inter-university champion.

In the 120yds. hurdles, A. G. Filbrow (Oxford University) knocked down three hurdles in finishing first in 15sec. and was accordingly disqualified. The race went to Lavery, of the Transvaal.

The next contest will be a Test match against South Africa on the famous Wanderers' ground on Saturday.

SERIAL STORY

One I Love

by LAURA LOU BROOKMAN

CHAPTER XLIV

Rolf's voice came clearly over the wire. "Hello, Janet. This is Rolf. Have you seen Betty to-day?"

"No, I haven't." "Oh," he seemed to hesitate. "I thought she might have dropped in to see her mother. Then you haven't heard anything more about the—necklace?"

"No. Mrs. Curtis talked to her on the telephone this morning. She promised to call if there was any news."

"I see." There was a pause, and then the man went on quickly. "I tried to call Betty but I couldn't get her. Just wanted to know if they'd found out anything yet."

Janet said, "I guess they haven't." Her voice sounded flat and tired. She was very tired, though she wasn't aware of the fact.

"Listen, Janet, you mustn't worry. Nobody could really think you took the necklace."

"Then you don't think that?" "Why, of course not! Betty was just nervous and excited last night. She didn't know what she was saying. The police can't do anything to you."

"Oh, Rolf!" "I'd have spoken up and told them it was ridiculous only—well, I thought it would make Betty more excited. Couldn't help it any."

When she said that detective again I'll tell him you couldn't have had anything to do with it."

Her voice was eager, trembling. "I wish you would! Maybe they'd believe you. They wouldn't believe anything I said."

She could not go on. She turned and pressed her hand to her mouth so that Rolf would not know that she was crying.

"Janet," he said. "Janet, listen—are you there?" "Yes."

"There's something funny about your voice. It doesn't sound right. Now remember, there isn't anything for you to worry about. These police men are a bunch of dumbbells. All that talk of their doesn't mean anything. The whole thing will blow over!"

"But, Rolf, it can't! Not until they find the person who really took the necklace. Don't you see? Until they do everyone will believe I did it!"

"No, they won't believe it. Mrs. Curtis doesn't. And Betty won't either after she's calmed down. There's nothing for you to worry about."

"I hope not."

"Of course there isn't. Well, I'll have to get back on the job. By the way, if—if you hear anything would you mind giving me a ring? I'll be at the office."

"Yes, I'll call you."

"I'm just anxious to know that everything's all right."

Janet said goodbye and put down the telephone. Rolf had both cheered and frightened her. It was good to know he believed in her but if he were right about the police, if they failed to clear up the mystery, she knew she would never be free of this cloud of guilt. They could not prove she took the pearls but they would believe it. Everyone would believe it. Mrs. Curtis who was trying to pretend her suspicions had not been aroused. Betty, openly accusing. These policemen and the others who might come for her at any minute.

"They've got to find them!" she told herself, gripping her hands together. "They've got to!"

She walked to the window and looked out. September sunshine fell on the lawn. Here and there were patches of shade and a faint breeze rustled the leaves of the trees. Outside everything was quiet, peaceful.

It would have been good to get outdoors, to feel that warm sunshine, to walk and walk until weariness overtook her. Janet turned away quickly. She could not go out. This room with its luxurious furnishings was a prison and she was a prisoner.

She felt something beside her and looked down. Buster, the Persian cat, rubbed his arched back against her and looked up coaxingly. Janet stooped and picked him up. "What's the matter, Buster?" she asked. "I don't see that you have anything to complain of."

She rubbed his head and the cat, in response, raised his pink nose high in the air. Buster purred in deepest contentment. There was nothing whatever the matter so far as he was concerned.

Janet was sitting with the cat in her arms when Lucy appeared suddenly. In the doorway "Oh, Miss Hill!" she exclaimed. "Do you know what's happened?"

Lucy's eyes were wide. She crossed the room quickly. "Look at this," she said. "Frederick just gave it to me."

"Isn't it terrible?" Lucy went on. "Does Mrs. Curtis know about it, do you suppose?"

Janet nodded. "Yes, she knows about it." The paragraphs below the picture gave a brief and somewhat garbled account of the loss of the necklace. They stated that Mrs. Carlysle had reported the disappearance of the necklace, "worth $1,200," to police, that there were several "mystery angles" of the case, and that a suspect had been examined.

"The name of the suspect," the newspaper said, "was withheld but it is understood it is a servant who had access to the apartment."

"Do they mean Marie?" Lucy asked excitedly. "She's the only one they could mean! My stars!"

"No, it isn't Marie," Janet told her quickly. "They think I took it."

"YOU!"

Janet's tone was flat and mechanical. "Yes. The police talked to me last night. That's where Mrs. Curtis and I were. They asked me a lot of questions and they may come any time again to-day."

"Oh!" There was horror in Lucy's eyes. She had drawn back and stood staring at the other girl. "The police!" she repeated. "You mean they'll come here?"

"I guess so."

The maid continued to eye her with undisguised alarm. "Oh, this is terrible!" she exclaimed. "If the police come here what will I do?"

"I guess you'll have to let them in," Janet told her. She was tired now. Terribly tired. She felt beaten, too. Now that the newspapers knew about it there was nothing more to hope for. They would print her name and probably her picture, being led away by the police.

"But why did you do it?" Lucy gasped. "Didn't you know you'd get caught?"

Janet looked away. "I didn't do it," she said, "but that doesn't seem to make any difference."

There was a step in the doorway and both girls turned. Mrs. Curtis was standing there. "What is it?" she asked. "Lucy, what are you so excited about?"

The maid pointed to the newspaper Janet held. "It's—that," she said. "About Mrs. Carlysle's necklace!"

Janet rose and handed Mrs. Curtis the newspaper. The woman uttered a low exclamation and then turned to Lucy. "I want all the servants to come here at once," she said. "Tell them immediately."

Five minutes later they trooped in—Frederick and Bertha and Lucy and lastly the cook. It was a brief meeting. Mrs. Curtis said that on no account were any of them to speak about the necklace. No matter who asked they were to deny that they knew anything about it.

"The matter," Mrs. Curtis said, "is in the hands of the police. I do not want any more talk about it and I am particularly anxious to keep it out of the newspapers. If I hear that any of you have said anything about the necklace to anyone outside the house you will be discharged. That is all."

The maids and the cook and the chauffeur departed. Janet felt Lucy's eyes on her as she saw her turn away quickly. Lucy, like the others, believed her guilty.

Mrs. Curtis left the room and Janet was alone again. Half an hour later she heard voices in the living room. Every muscle was taut but the girl remained motionless. It was Betty's voice and her mother's. She heard the voices rising and falling. They were talking about her, Janet knew. She could not hear what they said. There was nothing to do but wait breathlessly.

The sharp ringing of the doorbell brought the girl to her feet. Now! Now! They had come for her!

But there was no summons. A moment later Lucy, sitting through the hall like a frightened sparrow, paused at the library door. "It's the police!" she whispered hoarsely.

CINEMA NEWS

NOTES FROM THE THEATRES

"The Crusades," is Cecil B. DeMille's latest picture. It is great entertainment from every angle and for every kind of audience and is scheduled to open at the Queen's Theatre soon. Its every problem of taste and policy, as well as drama and workmanship, has been intelligently met. Because of the tolerant attitude that guided the production, and because of the religious nature of the drama has been treated from the detached, semi-historical viewpoint, the picture is not likely to suffer in any spot of world market, not even in the realm of Islam against which the Crusades hurled themselves. No less majestic and spectacular than other grandiose DeMille pictures this one is the most warmly human of the lot, with a powerfully moving story to give it heart, beautifully played in a sort of regal triangle by Loretta Young, Henry Wilcoxon and Ian Keith. As a whole the picture moves forward with majestic pageantry and cumulative suspense, while individual scenes and intimate detail are poignantly developed by DeMille's best direction. Regal pomp, intrigue which threatens the crusaders' unity, pagantry which dazzles, and the crashing impact of battles have never been so skillfully balanced that they never overshadow the simple love tale between Wilcoxon as the English king and Loretta Young, princess of Navarre, whom he makes his queen.

"The Informer"

In "The Informer," from which the RKO-Radio screen play was adapted, Liam O'Flaherty, the novelist, created a truly amazing "That character is Gypo Nolan, the primitive, Irish giant who is portrayed by Victor McLaglen and whose titanic downfall is the theme. The film will be shown on Wednesday at the King's Theatre. Liam O'Flaherty has created out of Ireland's bitter revolution in "The Informer," yet it is much broader in its dramatic scope, because of the love element vividly combined in it. "The Informer" was directed by John Ford, and in the strong cast are Margot Graham, Heather Angel, Preston Foster, Wallace Ford, and Un-

O'Corrner. "Girls Please"

Sydney Howard gives what must be considered the greatest performance of his screen career in "Girls Please," which is now at the Star Theatre. In the role of Mr. Trumpleasure, deputy headmistress of a girls' finishing school, Sydney has the widest possible scope for his drolleries. His comedy style is as deliberate and unforgotten as ever, and he derives his laughs from his own rich characterization rather than from slick turns of speed or breath-taking escapades. Howard's performance reaches a high-point when he dons the matronly clothes of a gin-drinking headmistress, and when he visits a local taproom and orders a mysterious drink known as a clothes-brush. These sequences will convulse any audience. Others prominent in the cast are Sylvia Arundale and Edna Earle, while figuring as pupils at the school are a bevy of beautiful maidens forming a veritable feast for the eyes. A few of them—Dorothy Butler for one—look future stellar material to this critic. In all, "Girls Please" is a grand mélange of pantomime, clowning which should pack the Star to capacity.

"Black Fury"

First National has made an epic in this story of life in the picturesque coal fields "Black Fury" which delighted audiences at the Queen's Theatre last night. Though bleak and stark in its actual settings, the characters have a warmth and humaneness that makes them always convincing. The familiar scenes of coal mining towns and, indeed, an entire coal mine were reproduced for this production with startling fidelity. Thrilling episodes follow tense situations in rapid succession as clashes between miners and thugs in the coal pits of an unscrupulous private detective agency occur. There are fierce mob battles in the streets of the town as well as in the depths of the mine. There is humour aplenty and colourful scenes such as the dance hall in which a real Hungarian orchestra plays as hundreds of Balkan-born men and women execute the dances of their native land. It would be unfair to future audiences to reveal the thrilling climax, or to outline in detail the episodes through which the miner hero of "Black Fury" reaches the heights of devotion and self-sacrifice. Never has Paul Muni given so stirring a performance. Always a master of make-up Muni becomes the character Joe Radok in the flesh. Karen Morley who has the role of the sweetheart, retains the sympathy of the audience throughout and the two work together splendidly.

"George White's 1935 Scandals," a splendid sunburst of a spectacle, is having its long-heralded engagement at the King's Theatre. There's something new under the sun after all. This is it! It's hard to begin praising, when half a dozen different things clamour for instant mention. There's the story, first of all, rich and arresting. Then there's the brilliant all-star cast of singers, actors and dancers, each one fit to dominate a picture. What talent! There's Alice Faye, James Dunn, Ned Sparks, Lydia Robert, Cliff Edwards, Arlene Judge, Eleanor Powell, Emma Dunn, Betty Hutton, and George White himself. Robin and George Broadway's ace composers, stand this 1935 issue, which stars where last year's edition left off. Glamour is lent by 200 talented beauties, each hand-picked by George White, in their 1,000 gorgeous costumes designed by Charles LeMaire, who is so good that Paris couturiers give him commissions. The entire Fox film was conceived, produced and directed by George White. "George White's 1935 Scandals" provides clean sparkling entertainment for every member of the family.

"Young Eagles"

There is no wild animal that campers in the jungle fear more than they do the puma. A member of the cat family, sometimes known as the panther, this creature makes up in agility what it lacks in ferocity and size. Its leaping ability is what renders it such a dangerous menace. For no matter how high shelter is built, one of these wild cats may spring up to it in the night and do untold damage before a revolver can be used. The methods of the Puma are graphically illustrated in "Young Eagles," a Boy Scout chapter film, the first sequence of which will be shown at the Alhambra on Tuesday and Wednesday. The heroes of this entertaining yarn—two American youngsters, forced, because of an airplane accident to shift for themselves in a Central American jungle—build a sleeping quarters elevated on bamboo poles. Confident that no animal can reach them, they retire only to be awakened by a shrill cry like that of a child or a woman in distress. Terror-stricken, they stare down into the gleaming eyes of a puma which, alternately crouching and springing, tries frantically to reach them. Unarmed, the boys have no alternative but to watch the creature until dawn. Pumas are but one of the wild jungle animals that render life exciting for these two young heroes. During their stay in the tropics they brave encounters with bears, bon-constrictors, jaguars and crocodiles.

LOCAL WEDDINGS

MISS A. LANDOLT MARRIES MR. H. P. REES

A wedding of much interest was solemnized at St. John's Cathedral on Saturday when Miss Amelie Patricia Landolt became the bride of Mr. Horace Peter Rees.

The Rev. H. W. Baines officiated at the ceremony, whilst appropriate music was rendered on the organ by Mr. Lindsay Lafford.

The bride, who is the daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. J. Landolt of Hongkong, is a well-known local hockey player, having appeared regularly for the St. Andrew's Club Ladies in the Cacer Clark Cup hockey competitions and friendly games. She has proved herself a stalwart in defence. The bridegroom, of Wm. Powell's Ltd., is the son of Mr. and Mrs. E. D. Rees of London.

Entering the Cathedral on the arm of her brother, Mr. J. Landolt of the Canadian Pacific Railway Co., the bride looked charming in a simply cut white gown with a train—created by Mme. D'Obry. A coronet of orange blossoms held the lovely silk tulle veil in place. She carried a sheaf of white roses.

Miss Gertrude White, as bridesmaid, wore a deep pastel blue organdy gown trimmed with velvet flowers and ribbons of the same shade. She wore a frilled organdy head-dress, and carried a sheaf of peach gladioli.

Little Wilma Way and Wallace Landolt (nephew of the bride) were flower girl and page boy. Wilma wore a Victorian styled gown of old rose shut tulle and as a head-dress a halo of flowers made of the same material. She carried a posy of pink roses.

The bride's sister-in-law Mrs. J. S. Landolt, as Matron of Honour, wore a royal blue maroon dress with shoes and hat to match.

The duties of best man were undertaken by Mr. T. D. Paton of the Dairy Farm Co.

A reception was held after the wedding ceremony at 33B Wong-niching Road, the residence of the bride's brother.

Later the newly-wed couple left for the honeymoon, which will be spent in Japan. On leaving, Mrs. Rees wore a yellow crepe-de-chine dress with hat to match.

Miss Beltrao and Mr. Barros Married on Saturday

The wedding took place at the Rosary Church on Saturday afternoon of Miss C. Beltrao of the local office of the Mitsubishi Kaisha, and Mr. C. E. Barros, of the Nederlandsche Bank. The Rev. Father Rossi officiated.

The bride wore a satin and lace dress and carried a bouquet of white roses. She was attended by the Misses N. Beltrao and B. Beltrao, in yellow satin, and her nephew and niece, Master A. Remedios and Miss O. Remedios, in black and yellow.

A reception was held at the bridegroom's home, No. 244 Nathan Road. The honeymoon is being spent in Canton.

MARECHAL JOFFRE

FINE-FRENCH MAIL-LINER ARRIVES FROM EUROPE

Though by no means a new ship, the Marechal Joffre which arrived here on Saturday morning from Europe and left the same afternoon for Shanghai, aroused a good deal of comment as she lay at No. 1 Kowloon wharf, for it was the first time the ship has visited Hongkong.

The Marechal Joffre was built in 1931 by the Societe Provencale de Constr. Nav. and was originally intended to ply on the Madagascar run, but, like most of the ships owned by the Messageries Maritimes Co., she has now been switched onto the Far Eastern run for a time.

The arrival of the ship may be taken, too, as an indication that the speeding up of the Messageries Maritimes Europe-Hongkong service, details of which were given in a paper some weeks ago, has begun. This speeding up will be completed when other of the older vessels have been fitted with new bows, and in some cases re-juvenated engines, to give them greater speed, and when the new liner Paul Doumer makes her first trip to Hongkong.

The line will then have five and possibly six, fast vessels running from Europe to the Far East, and will be able to maintain a service equal in speed and comfort to the German, Italian, and British lines.

About the Ship

The Marechal Joffre is not as large a liner as most of the express steamers running to the Far East, being of 13,000 tons; nor is she an exact sister ship to any of the other vessels of her line which run here.

The most obvious difference is the ship's cruiser stern. She is the only Messageries Maritimes ship running to Hongkong so built.

The vessel is a motor ship, being driven by internal combustion engines. Unlike her nearest sister, the Felix Roussel, which is an electrically driven ship.

At present the schedules of the French line which have been maintained for the past few years are still in force, but gradually faster and better ships are being brought here, either by transferring faster ships from other routes where there is less competition or by rebuilding older ships which are well known here. So far this process is incomplete and the Marechal Joffre is forced to maintain a schedule much slower than that of which she is capable.

The ship is 408 feet long, and 61 feet wide, and her internal appointments compare favourably with those of any of the liners running from Europe, the cabins and public rooms being airy and spacious.

ETHIOPIA'S LACK OF ARMAMENTS

"SEND US BULLETS AND GUNS"

VOLUNTEERS NOT WANTED

Addis Ababa, Oct. 5. Ethiopia wants guns and munitions for her army, not untrained men from abroad as volunteers. She could have had thousands of the latter; in the former she is sadly deficient.

Foreign arms embargoes are the answer. Shipments have been held up in European ports when they were already aboard ship. Others have been stopped after being paid for.

And the army is at war with probably the most heterogeneous collection of weapons ever put in the field. There are the shiny modern Mausers of the Imperial army; there are a handful of modern machine rifles, machine guns, artillery and anti-aircraft units.

And beyond that, in the provincial forces and in the levies which have been mobilized to defend the country, there is every conceivable type of rifle from Loefflers of 1870 down to their great-grand sons of comparatively modern make.

Whether many of them are safe to shoot off is still an open question; and with munitions stores scanty at best, where the scores of types of ammunition necessary to charge them can be found is a problem to turn any General Staff gray.

"They should offer us guns and bullets, not their own services," say Ethiopians, referring to the volunteers from abroad.

PLENTY OF VOLUNTEERS

There have been enough of them. There was Mr. Zeb Angel of the Angel Brothers Hospital, Franklin, N.C., who offered two coloured divisions, fully equipped with the best arms, provided Ethiopia had the ships to transport them. Mr. Angel was also ready, although he admitted he had none on hand at the moment, to supply 20,000 negro aviators trained for combat, provided Ethiopia has the planes. It has eight. There have been scores of other letters in the same tone.

There have also been applications from adventurers, jobless and ex-soldiers from every corner of the earth. It is estimated there could have been several thousand recruited in Northern Europe alone where negro feeling swings so strongly toward Ethiopia, and so on. Political exiles—it is said many Austrian Legionnaires have applied—have been among them. All have been refused. Except for a French flying officer and the handful of Swedes and Belgians in the military missions, there is no foreign military man in Ethiopian pay. The reasons for the refusal of the others are clear.

First, Ethiopia does not need man-power. Secondly, it cannot afford to transport men from all corners of the world. Thirdly, it needs all the equipment it can get for its own army. At the best, there are glaring deficiencies. Finally, there are the mountains, the chasms, the fever-ridden valleys, the bush, the disease, and the deserts where even the highland Amharas do not care to fight if they can avoid it. Foreigners would be little use under such conditions, without long acclimatization.

Ethiopians believe the Italians will discover that, too, before very long.—United Press.

MISSION TO JAPAN

SHANGHAI MERCHANTS AND BANKERS DEPARTURE

Shanghai, Oct. 6. Thirty-seven members of the Chinese Economic Mission to Japan left this morning by the Shanghai Maru.—Reuter.

Earlier reports stated that the Mission expected to remain in the Island Empire for about a month. The party is headed by Mr. Wu Ting-chang, general manager of the Yenching Bank. Prominent members of the Mission include Messrs. Liu Hung-sheng, general manager of the China Merchants Steam Navigation Company, Chiang Kiang-nau, Vice president of the Central Bank of China, Chow Tao-min, manager of the Chin-cheng Bank, and Jung Taung-ching, who is known as the "king of China's flour industry."

On its arrival in Japan, the mission will break up into several groups, each conducting an elaborate inquiry into financial, economic and other conditions. Their avowed object is to lay the foundation for a Sino-Japanese economic rapprochement.

U. S. EMBARGO

STATE OF WAR OFFICIALLY RECOGNISED

Washington, Oct. 6. President Roosevelt has issued a proclamation announcing the existence of a state of war between Italy and Ethiopia, thereby automatically bringing into force an embargo on the export of munitions to both belligerents under the Neutrality Act.

The embargo is confined to actual munitions and does not extend to raw materials. The list is identical to that for which export licences are required, namely rifles, machine-guns, all classes of ammunition, all types of war vessels, including aircraft-carriers and submarines, aircraft, assembled or dismantled, designed for fighting, utilising guns or dropping of bombs, as well as aircraft engines, mustard gas and flame-throwers and includes all aircraft, both civil and military.

The figures issued by the State Department recently show that Ethiopia will not be affected by this embargo but Italy will lose a valuable source for aeroplane parts and engines. The other munition exports to Italy are not important.

President Roosevelt wirelessly from the U.S.S. Houston, immediately upon receipt of a message from the Secretary of State, Mr. Cordell Hull advising him officially that a state of war existed, directing Mr. Hull to issue the proclamation.

Must Recognise War

At the same time the President made the following statement: Notwithstanding the hope we had entertained that war would be avoided and the exertion of our influence in that direction we are now compelled to recognise the Ethiopia and Italian armed forces are, in combat, thus creating a state of war within the meaning of the joint resolution contained in the Neutrality Act.

"In these specific circumstances I desire it to be understood that any of our people who voluntarily engage in transaction of any character with either of the belligerents do so at their own risk."

An all-inclusive denial of protection to citizens engaging in transactions with the belligerents goes far beyond the wording of the Act though it accords with resolutions introduced by Senators Nye and Clarke, but which were not passed.

It presumably means that the United States would not officially protect ships or cargoes bound for either belligerent, namely that she does not oppose a League or any other blockade and apparently would not insist on any neutral rights for commerce whatever.—Reuter.

Nye's Timidity

Cedar Falls, Iowa, Oct. 4. Senator Gerald P. Nye, Chairman of the U.S. Committee on Investigation of the Munitions Industry, in an interview with the United Press to-day, expressed the opinion that the United States acting jointly with France and Britain in the application of economic sanctions against Italy would be led into war.

"The only way for us to be neutral," he stated. "We must move against neither belligerent. Ninety-nine per cent. of the American people are determined to avoid war, but a few weeks of propaganda may easily reverse that stand. We must remain rational."

Senator Nye said he feared the return of "the brutal days of 1914."—United Press.

Mr. Borah's "No"

Twin Falls, Idaho, Oct. 5. Senator Borah declared to-day that the Italo-Ethiopian war is purely one of territorial aggression. It is a serious thing, yet I would not sacrifice the life of one American in it, no matter how long it continues nor how many countries are involved.—United Press.

CONFUCIAN WORSHIP

ACTION TAKEN AGAINST MISSION SCHOOL

Kirin, Oct. 6. The Provincial Government has decided to take "drastic action" against the Scottish Mission School owing to the refusal of the headmaster, Mr. MacWhite, to allow the Chinese pupils to worship the Confucian idols.

The final instructions on the matter are now being awaited by the Department of Education at Changchun.—Reuter.

Some speculation was caused early yesterday evening by the glare of what appeared to be a huge fire in the direction of Shek-O. The blaze could be seen distinctly from Peak. It was learned on enquiry that the conflagration was a grass and brushwood fire, of a rather extensive nature, affecting the hillside not far from the Cape D'Agular wireless station. The blaze appears to have started about 6.40 p.m., and fanned by the wind soon had a hold in the dry grass and shrubs on the hillside. A party of men were immediately organized by the "Botanical" and Forestry Department, and they successfully dealt with the outbreak, preventing it from spreading further.

GENERAL'S FAREWELL

CEREMONY AT QUEEN'S PIER ON SATURDAY

A large number of distinguished local residents collected at Queen's Pier at 10.15 a.m. on Saturday to say farewell to Lt-General O. C. Borrett, C.B., C.M.G., C.B.E., D.S.O., who left the Colony at noon by the F. and O. liner Rajputana.

General Borrett is vacating the post of General Officer Commanding the British Troops in China, being relieved temporarily by Major-General F. S. Thackeray, D.S.O., M.C., A.D.C., who arrived in the Colony a short time ago, and, assuming command until the arrival in December of Major-General A. W. Bartholomew, C.B., C.M.G., C.B.E., D.S.O. to fill the post.

On arrival at Queen's Pier on Saturday, General Borrett took the salute from guards of honour provided by the Royal Navy and the 1st Battalion, Lincolnshire Regiment. The General then said goodbye to Service and civilian friends and boarded the launch Victoria which conveyed him to the Rajputana at Kowloon.

A large number of friends also went to the Kowloon wharf to bid farewell to the General.

ROMAN LEGIONS TRAMP TO ADOWA

AKSUM IS NEXT OBJECTIVE ADVANCE BEHIND BOMBARDMENT LOSSES SEVERE IN TWO-DAY BATTLE

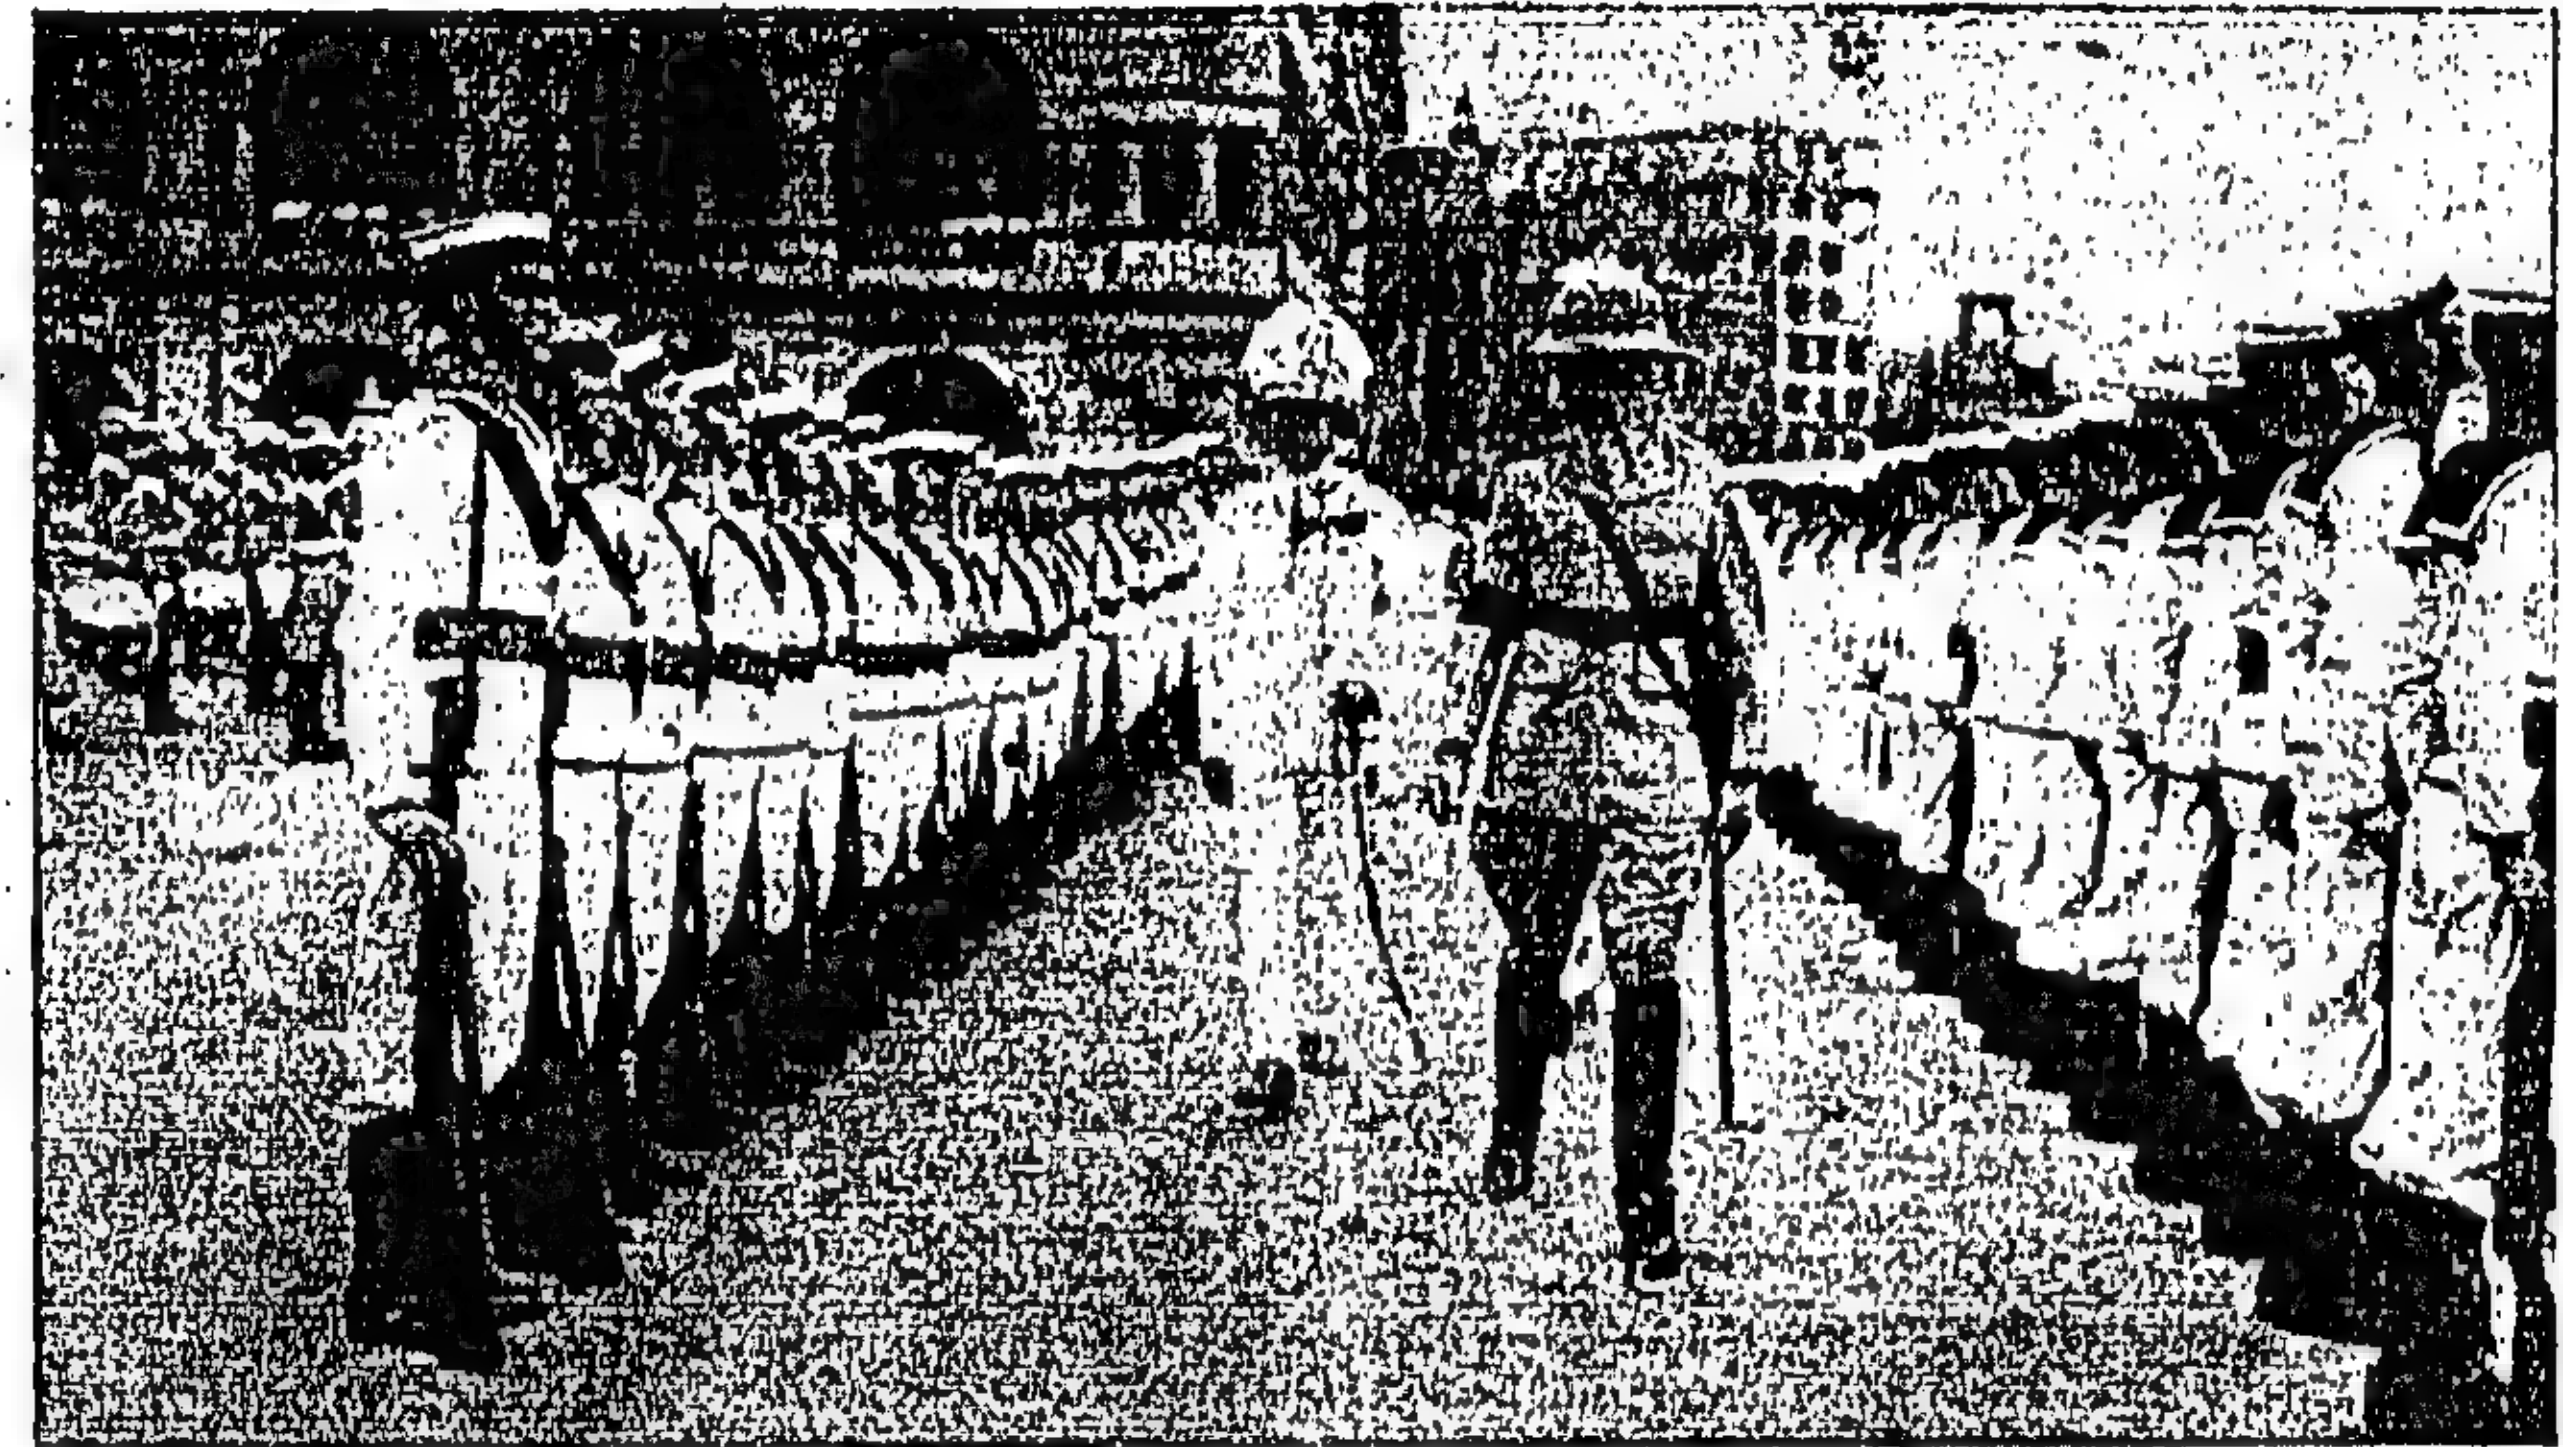

(By Webb Miller)
(By Telegraph. Copyright, Telegraphic Messages Ordinance, 1904. Received, Oct. 7, 10.30 a.m.)
Adowa, Oct. 6.
The Italian legions marched into Adowa wildly singing Giovanna. They are exultant at their victory. Their commander-in-chief, General Debono, immediately announced their next objective, Aksum, an ancient Ethiopian religious centre.
From Italian army headquarters it is stated that after a prolonged bombardment by aerial bombers and artillery, tanks and infantry thrusts overcame the first serious Ethiopian resistance. I watched the artillery in action and the infantry and tank assaults. The planes were far ahead of the troops.
The Italians repulsed a counter-attack near Debrasina where the Ethiopians suffered heavy losses in a two-day engagement.

Adowa's defenders retreated after checking the Italians' advance and delaying the town's capture by twenty-four hours. The Italian high command had anticipated a quick victory.
Natives everywhere are displaying the white flag and are surrendering. Following the occupation of Adowa the Italians claimed that Ethiopian chieftains at Hala had surrendered.
The Ethiopians managed to remove their antiquated artillery from Adowa despite the aerial bombardment and the heavy machine-gun fire which harassed the retreating troops.
Over 2,000 square miles is now in the hands of the Italian armies. —United Press.

LULL IN FIGHTING
Addis Ababa, Oct. 7.
A lull in the fighting is reported from the Adowa front.
Both sides are bringing up reinforcements.
With the arrival of fine weather Ethiopian columns destined for three fronts, the Tigre, Dessaye and Ogaden, have been able to move more quickly. Hundreds of thousands of the black warriors are now reported on the move.
ADOWA CASUALTIES
It is learned from the Ethiopian Army headquarters that 40 women and 32 children were killed by Italian bombs at Adowa. —Reuter.

IL DUCE FOR ADOWA
London, Oct. 7.
According to the Daily Mirror's correspondent with the Italian Northern Army in Ethiopia, Signor Mussolini will shortly fly to Adowa and will there unveil a memorial to the Italian soldiers killed in the massacre of 1896. This stone monument was carried to Adowa yesterday by the Italian troops. —Reuter.

UNKNOWN INVADES PULPIT
London, Oct. 6.
Whilst the congregation was at prayer during a mass in Westminster Cathedral, an unknown man quietly ascended the pulpit, and in clear, ringing tones, denounced the Catholic Church for not preventing Italy from making war on Ethiopia.
The protest ended when the interrupter was quietly led out of the building. —Reuter Special.

CUBS WIN DRAMATIC STRUGGLE RISK DEFEAT TO SAVE PITCHER
WARNEKE'S ARM HURT
(Special to "Telegraph")
(By Telegraph. Copyright, Telegraphic Messages Ordinance, 1904. Received, October 7, 10.30 a.m.)
Chicago, Oct. 6.
Chicago's manager, Charlie Grimm, won the most dramatic gamble in baseball history when he risked defeat against Detroit today in order to save his pitcher's arm. Chicago won, making the world series score 3-2 in Detroit's favour.
It was an heroic gesture. Grimm placed the welfare and career of young Warneke above the glories of a championship and the thousands of dollars accruing to the winners. He "yanked" his star pitcher in the seventh inning.
The crowd was stunned when the loud-speakers announced at the beginning of the seventh: "Lee is now pitching for Chicago." Seconds passed; then, like a rising wind, a roar of amazement went up from the packed stands. The mighty Warneke was "yanked" for no apparent reason and replaced by the rookie, Lee. Fans demanded in amazement: "Has Grimm gone crazy?"
A few minutes later the loud-speakers announced that Warneke had injured his shoulder pitching to Detroit's twirler, Rowe, in the third inning.
"After all, we are human," Grimm said. "The arm and the future of the youngster mean more to me than the championship. Warneke might have finished, but he might have ruined his pitching arm for life."
Warneke protested against his removal bitterly.
Monday's pitchers are Bridges and French. —United Press.

WARNEKE'S VICTORY
Chicago, Oct. 6.
Although Warneke, Chicago's ace right-hander, was forced to retire from the game with a strained shoulder after pitching six innings, the Cubs beat the Detroit Tigers three to one today, with Lee finishing the pitching job.
The result left Detroit the leader in the series by three to two.
Warneke received credit for the victory since he left the game with Chicago already leading by two to nothing, as a result of a home run by Klein, who dropped the ball into the right field stands in the second inning, scoring Herman, who had tripled ahead of him.
The Tigers, needing only one game to win the series, threatened once in the ninth inning, when Gehring came in on an infield hit for their only score. Gehring and Goellin started a rally with infield hits but Cavarretta, Cubs' first baseman, ended the game by making a spectacular catch of a foul ball. —Reuter.

TYPHOON DANGER PASSED STORM CENTRE 120 MILES SOUTH
WIND FORCE SUBSIDES
The danger to Hongkong from the typhoon is now past and the force of the wind is expected gradually to decrease during the afternoon, according to the Royal Observatory.
At about 10 a.m. to-day the position of the typhoon was 120 miles due south of Hongkong, moving north-west. There is no reason to expect it to curve again and should it follow its present path it will strike the coast about 100 miles west of Macao.
The wind increased slightly during the morning as the typhoon curved and brought to the Colony south-east winds. After about 11 a.m. the wind force gradually decreased, however, and should continue to do so during the afternoon, though strong south-easterly winds are expected all day.
The typhoon has not interfered with shipping a great deal. The Nellore sailed this morning for Japan as scheduled and the Pyrrhus, from Singapore, was reported to have kept well south of the typhoon and is not greatly affected. The President Jackson, which left here on Saturday, ran into some very nasty weather on her way to Manila, but was not damaged or delayed.

WEATHER REPORT
The Royal Observatory reports that a moderate anticyclone covers North China and the Yellow Sea. A depression is moving eastward across the northern part of the Sea of Japan. At 6 a.m. the typhoon was centred about 140 miles to the south of Hongkong, moving N.W. threatening the coast between Macao and Kwangchow-wan. The Pacific typhoon is situated about 400 miles to the S.E. of Tokyo, moving N.N.E. Local forecast:—N.E. to S.E. winds, strong; overcast, rain.

WAR BLAME ON ITALIANS LEAGUE COMMITTEE FINDINGS ROME NOT CONCERNED WITH SANCTIONS

Geneva, Oct. 6.
The Committee of Six has decided that Italy has violated the League of Nations Covenant.
The Committee establishes the violation upon General Debono's order to the troops to advance across the Ethiopian frontier, resulting in the invasion of Ethiopian territory, the bombing of Adigrat and Adowa, and thus clearly indicating that Italy is the aggressor in the present war, without specifically naming her.
The report does not require unanimity or even a majority vote in the Assembly, but each country voting for this resolution pledges itself to adopt automatically the consequences of the accusation, like sanctions. —Reuter.

ANSWER TO BRITAIN
Geneva, Oct. 6.
The Government of France has replied affirmatively to the British request for a pledge of French support in the event of any power making an unprovoked attack upon British ships or possessions in the Mediterranean.
The Note declares that France will lend her help to any member of the League which is exposed to aggressive attack through having taken precautionary measures against such an attack, but on three conditions:
1. That the precautionary measures were taken by mutual agreement;
2. That measures must apply to air, land and water simultaneously;
3. The measures must apply equally when the menace comes from a non-member of the League. —Reuter.

IF CHILD IS CROSS WON'T EAT

Take Doctor's Advice
Results Will Surprise You

If your precious child won't eat without coaxing, is nervous and underweight, do what doctors the world over advise: Give him a little Castoria and you will see a marked improvement the first day.

Authorities have found intestinal
absorption of poisons to be the cause of most child ailments. Even when the child's habits may seem regular, poisons seep through the
system and do damage. The stomach is upset. Food does not digest properly.
The nerves lose their delicate balance.

Nothing can correct this insidious
condition quite as easily and naturally as Castoria. It tastes so good children beg for it. And it swiftly
purges the little system of poisons. It settles the stomach, improves digestion and restores nerve-poise. Then
Nature does the rest as only Nature
can. Appetite for food quickly returns. Health is restored to normal.
And as a result the child gains weight
fast and becomes sturdy and strong.

Now take care of your child this
safe, drugless way. Get a bottle of Castoria and try it. Results will delight you.

1936
MODEL

Gaol Sentence MASQUERADE AS PEER AND SINGAPORE DOCTOR

F. M. S. Judge
As Patient
On Ship

Made Love To Clergyman's Daughter

An astonishing story of a masquerade in major's uniform was told at Andover Police Court last month, when Richard Gerald Willoughby, described as of Upper Berkeley-street, London, appeared on summonses alleging that he had unlawfully worn a major's uniform and military decorations and medals at South Tidworth on August 3.

Both summonses were issued on information laid by Superintendent S. Bennett, of the Andover
police.

The first alleged that he "did unlawfully wear certain military decorations and medals" not being a person authorized so to do by the Army Council, contrary to section 18, Army (Annual) Act, 1919.

The second alleged that on August 3 "then being a person not serving in His Majesty's Forces, you did unlawfully wear without His Majesty's permission the uniform of a major of the Royal Army Medical Corps
contrary to section 2 of the Uniform Act."

He pleaded guilty to both summonses. On the first he was sentenced to three months' imprisonment. On the second he was fined £5.

Superintendent Bennett said that Willoughby arrived at Tidworth shortly after mid-day on August 3.

"He visited various units and came under particular notice about 4 o'clock when Lieut. Prince, Quartermaster at the Hospital, was watching a cricket match on the Royal Army Medical Corps ground."

"Willoughby drove up in a large car and alighted.
"He was dressed in the uniform of a major of the Royal Army Medical Corps. He wore field boots and a sword, and the decorations he wore were the Military Cross, the 1914-15 Star, the General Service medal, the Victory medal and the French Croix de Guerre."

"He was on the ground for three-quarters of an hour watching the cricket."

At The Officers' Mess
"He asked to be directed to the R.A.M.C. officers' mess. He was accompanied by Lieut. Prince, who offered refreshment which Willoughby accepted."

"He told Lieut. Prince that he was Major Willoughby, and that he had come down in connection with an outbreak of diphtheria at the camp. He also said there was a lot of tonsillitis about."

"He said he had come from Millbank, and that he occupied field officer's quarters there.
Subsequently he went to the O.T.C.
camp, and was entertained to dinner in the officers' mess."

"His manner became objectionable through his taking too much to drink. He was sent back to the military hospital and arrived there about 8.45. He was put on a sofa and went to sleep."

"By this time doubts had arisen as to his identity. In the Army list and the medical directory his name could not be found."

"He was not known at the Milbank officers' mess and it was decided to take him to the police station. He was seen by a sergeant, and was accused by Lieut.

Prince, of unlawfully wearing officer's uniform.

"Struck Off"

"The police officer asked him about it, and he said he was Dr.
Richard Gerald Willoughby, of Upper Berkeley-street, London, W., that he was a retired major of
the Royal Army Medical Corps,
and was entitled to wear uniform."

"Later he said, 'I cannot now call myself a doctor as my name has been struck off the Register. Strictly speaking, I am not entitled to wear uniform, but I have done no harm.'"

"He was, he said, entitled to wear the medals."

"Records at the War Office have been searched and no trace can be found of his having held a commission in the R.A.M.C. nor of the medals he was wearing."

Superintendent Bennett said that Willoughby was first known as Percy Seymour Kelly.

"In that name," added the superintendent, "he enlisted in the Duke of Cornwall's Light Infantry in September, 1914. He was discharged as acting-sergeant on being appointed to a temporary commission on October 5. He was appointed second-lieutenant, 2nd Batt. Royal Fusiliers, on that date."

Removed From Army

"He changed his name by deed poll from Percy Seymour Kelly to Percy Seymour Willoughby on October 6, 1914. He resigned in 1915."

"He then enlisted as Robert O. Kelly in April 1916, and was discharged as acting-sergeant on being appointed to a commission on April 25, 1916."

"As Eric Patrick Cosmo Gordon of Kelly he was appointed to a temporary commission for service in the infantry in April 1916."

"As Percy Seymour Kelly he served from July to October 1918, when he was discharged, with the rank of lance-corporal, as being no longer physically fit for war service."

"The first police record of this man was in the name of Percy Seymour Kelly, Merion Private Hotel, London.
He posed as an officer of the Canadian Rifles. He obtained food and drink to the amount of £1.10s."

Posed As Clergyman

"He travelled about the country posing as a clergyman and visiting clergymen."

"On one occasion he actually preached a sermon.
"In September, 1914, he obtained a commission in the 2nd Royal Fusiliers and later was called on to resign because of unsatisfactory conduct. He later joined the 15th Rifle Brigade as a private."

"Early in 1916 in the name of Willoughby he stayed at the Great Central Hotel and posed as a rifleman in the County of London Regiment.
A complaint was received then that he had obtained a clergyman's outfit from a firm at Salisbury without payment and a warrant was issued."

Fingerprints From U.S.A.

"In 1914 fingerprints from Boston, U.S.A. were received in England from which it appears he had been charged with fraud and impersonating a British officer."

"He was sentenced to six months,

"An Italian appeared the other day
in London on a new and rather peculiar type of cycle. This invention is called "Vallocino" and its owner maintains that it is far more com-
cycle."

and on his discharge was deported from America to England.

"On his return he became acquainted with a clergyman. He made love to his daughter, aged 20, and so impressed him and the family that they agreed that he should marry her."

"Between June and August, 1919, in the name of Dr. Willoughby, he was in Scotland, posing as the nephew of a certain lord."

"He then absconded to Canada, where he posed as a doctor. In September, 1924, the police received notification from the Canadian police that he was being deported. He was sentenced to one month at Montreal and deported from Canada on August 4, 1924."

"On arrival in England he was arrested at Sheffield for obtaining a car without payment."

"He was sentenced to two months' hard labour for fraud. From this sentence he was released on February 25, 1926. In April of that year he was in Somerset with a woman travelling by car representing himself as Dr. Willoughby of the Charing Cross Hospital."

"He obtained food and drink to the amount of £2 10s. and £2 in money."

"He was sentenced to six and three months' hard labour consecutively."

"Three other offences were taken into consideration on this occasion.
When he was arrested he was posing as Captain Lionel Rufus Bimmore."

Coloured Doctor

"Before serving his sentence he had obtained a situation as a chartered accountant at a salary of over £1,000 a year. He received £80 for expenses, and when he was arrested he only had £10 8s. in his possession. It was evident he had no intention of taking up the situation."

"He was released from his sentence in April 1926, when he purchased a doctor's practice for £30 at Newington Green-road from a coloured doctor."

"He sold the drugs to a chemist, but did not pay over the purchase price."

"He posed at that time as Dr. Duff Brown. He advertised the practice for sale, and sold it for £50."

"Before the sale he stocked the dispensary, and to impress the doctor with the quantity of patients he obtained persons from the Labour Exchange to fill his consulting room on the pretence that he wanted a male and a female clerk."

At Singapore

"He was next heard of at Panama, where he posed as Dr. Robert Penley Martin. His passport was issued in that name at Melbourne and bore visas for Florida, Virginia, Suez and other ports."

"It was also ascertained that in May 1931, in the name of Dr. Robert Penley Martin, he obtained an appointment as ship's surgeon from the Blue Funnel Line at Liverpool."

"He sailed under these conditions and at one time went on a tour against the company's rules, and incurred expenses amounting to £32 10s. against the company."

"On the return voyage he was landed at Singapore suffering from malaria fever. On his recovery the government of the Straits Settlements agreed to him, as Dr.
Martin, exonerate to England, a judge who was ill."

Great Britain and Italy Manoeuvre Their Mediterranean Fleets

While the Ethiopian army battles with the invaders along the Italian frontiers Great Britain and Italy look to their naval power. Great Britain, at this stage, is decidedly interested but anxious spectator over Italy's fleet manoeuvres in the Mediterranean and near the Suez canal. The British have sent their ships of war to various strategic places along the Arabian coast where strong British fortresses are maintained for protection of the Suez Canal.

WOMAN SPENDS 27 YEARS IN A HOSPITAL

A Bradford woman who had been in hospital for twenty-seven years without a break, has died. She was Mrs. Annie Lee and she was admitted to the St. Luke's Hospital in 1908 suffering from a painful illness. With the exception of a short period during the war when the hospital was used for wounded soldiers and she was transferred to the Hadding Institution, she remained there until her death. Up till ten years ago her husband visited her daily. Then he died in the same hospital. Two years ago Mrs. Lee saw a bus for the first time. She was being driven across the city for treatment at the Royal Eye and Ear Hospital.

Husband For Sale At £300 Cash

THERE have been cases of women who wanted to buy husbands, and men who have wanted to buy wives are fairly common.

But, surely, the strangest proposal is that of Mrs. Mary Ann Cordes, an Irish woman, who is offering her "husband for sale at £300 cash down."

And, stranger still, Mr. Cordes, is quite agreeable although he says he is still in love with his wife!

The real trouble is that Mrs. Cordes is homesick. She is now in New York, states Reuter, but she wants to revisit her native Ireland to see her old mother.

If the "sale" should be effected, she means to spend the rest of her days in the Green Isle.

Up till now, however, all this has been only a dream.

The Cordes have been almost down and out for the last 10 years, and cannot raise the money for the third-class steamer fare.

Mr. Cordes, who is 40, entirely sympathizes with his wife's longing for her native land. So far, however, no woman has made a bid for him.

"I'll Get Divorced"

"No young woman need apply," he stipulates. "She must be between thirty-five and forty-five, or even more."

"Young women are not worth their salt these days," he added.

"If I can find a woman, preferably one with a farm, who wants a good, steady husband, I'll get a Mexican divorce from Mary and marry again. Then Mary can go to Ireland and see her poor old mother."

"There must be plenty of lonely women who would appreciate a man like mine," Mrs. Cordes chimed in.

"I am doing this only for Mary," Mr. Cordes concluded. "She deserves a break."

Skeleton May Solve Great Controversy COLLEGE FIND THEORY

Leicester, Sept. 30.

THE discovery of a skeleton in an ancient lead-lined coffin at Leicester may solve one of the great controversies of English history.

There is reasonable evidence for the belief that the skeleton is that of Richard III, who was killed at the Battle of Bosworth in 1485.

Fredric March, the famous American cinema star, who is spending a holiday in England before commencing his next work, "Anthony Adverse", is, as seen above, very occupied at his hotel in London signing autographs for numerous admirers.

NEW SCHEME ENDS THOSE WIFELY TEARS

HOW many tears has your wife shed because you forgot the date of your wedding anniversary or her birthday?

Now, if you lived in London, you would need have no further trouble in that direction.

A London business man has formed an organisation which, for the sum of 6s. a year, guarantees to remind you of all birthdays and wedding anniversaries.

"I formed this organisation," he said, "because recently I forgot the date of expiry of my motor licence, so I tried to devise a means of reminding people of the things that matter in their lives. Already I have 6,000 clients on my book, but I am aiming at a million."

"One of the queerest requests I had was from a woman who wished to be reminded of 16 different appointments she had with her hairdresser."

"Reminders" is the name of the organisation, and its offices are in Bond-street.

If it should be proved to be his remains it will decide whether his appellation "Crookback" was simply a term of reproach or due to his being truly a hunchback.

Historians have crossed swords for years over this point.

Excavator Discovery

A huge mechanical excavator was at work on the site of the new wing at the Leicester College of Arts and Technology and this old coffin was suddenly revealed.

The Leicester Archaeology Society intend to investigate the matter closely. Many other skeletons have been found in the past few years in this neighbourhood during excavations on the college, but in each case the body had been buried without a coffin.

According to local theory, those skeletons were most likely monks or members of a collegiate brotherhood who lived there some five or six hundred years ago.

Registrar's Theory

The registrar of the college, Mr. Drury told me to-day:

"I am prepared to laugh at our conjectures in this matter, but there are a good many grounds for accepting the view that this skeleton may indeed be that of Richard III.

"Richard was killed at Bosworth, which is very near to this place. He was a young man—35 years old. He was of repulsive appearance, is understood to have been hunchbacked and to have a withered arm.

"Now the skull of this skeleton appears to be that of a man of repulsive appearance. He was obviously of low mentality. The forehead is low and the underjaw protrudes beyond the upper one by about a quarter of an inch.

"About 200 yards from the spot there is a bridge upon which a plate records the fact: 'Near this spot lie the remains of King Richard III, who was killed at Bosworth Field.'

"It is generally understood by historians that the King's body was brought on horseback from Bosworth and flung into the river here.

"Our conjecture is that the news of the fate of the King would certainly reach the members of the brotherhood who lived here. They would very likely recover the body from the river and bury it within the precincts of the church."

Super-Slayer, or Boasting Ananias? SPATE OF "CONFESSIONS"

Twenty-one years old and a murderer twenty-seven times over. That's the self-accused record of a Californian lad, Earl Cramer. Either the world's most colossal liar or the world's most cold-blooded assassin. Which is he—Super Assassin or Super Ananias?

When arrested (August 25) he proposed to tell two or three thrillers a day to the police until he had made a clean breast of his mania to kill.

The bodies of two men were found at once—65-year-old James C. Kennett, of Chicago, whom Cramer said he killed in a quarrel over food, and John Thomas Mangan, aged 17, of Sacramento, whom he knifed and shot because the red-haired youth had borrowed his rifle.

Then Cramer sent searchers back to the same spot, where a giant former sailor had lived as a hermit while seeking gold and radium, to hunt for the bodies of Fred Realing, mine watchman, who disappeared last November, and John Johnson, an aged prospector, who dropped out of sight in July.

"I didn't like the people around me," Cramer told the authorities. "You go find those bodies, and then I'll tell you some more. If you look in old prospecting holes you'll find men buried everywhere."

Son Of A Barber

Unless this boastful young Bluebeard gave searchers the right directions their task of finding Realing's and Johnson's bodies appear almost insurmountable.

The place (a mining district called Fidda Flats) is dotted with scores of abandoned mines.

In one of them Kennett's body lay since last July until Cramer's confession told where it could be found.

Mangan's body was found accidentally by a cattle man in search of rustlers.

When telling of killing Realing and Johnson, Cramer, the son of a San Francisco barber, boasted of slaying a man named Jeff Baughman, at Loomis, California, in 1933, and a youth in a California C.C.C. camp last year.

The authorities appear to doubt the story of Baughman's death. They say he was not as certain of the details as he had been in confessing to the murder of Kennett and Mangan and in telling where he had buried the bodies of Realing and Johnson.

Cramer's intimation that the list of his victims will reach 27 was made to a deputy-sheriff. The district attorney does not believe it.

In his cell after his confession Cramer read eagerly every word published about his exploits in every newspaper that was available. He delighted in the stories of his confessed cruelties.

A Cattle Rustler

This young man presents a puzzling personality. Although he professes to prefer his own company to that of his fellow-men, he often shared his cabins and his food, or their cabins and their food, with other prospectors for Californian gold.

Kennett he met on a freight train, and invited him to scratch for gold with him. The red-haired Mangan he also met while wandering about.

His reasons for killing his friends are trivial. He says he shot Kennett and slashed the body with a knife in a dispute over the division of food after they had decided to separate.

Mangan died because he had borrowed Cramer's rifle without permission.

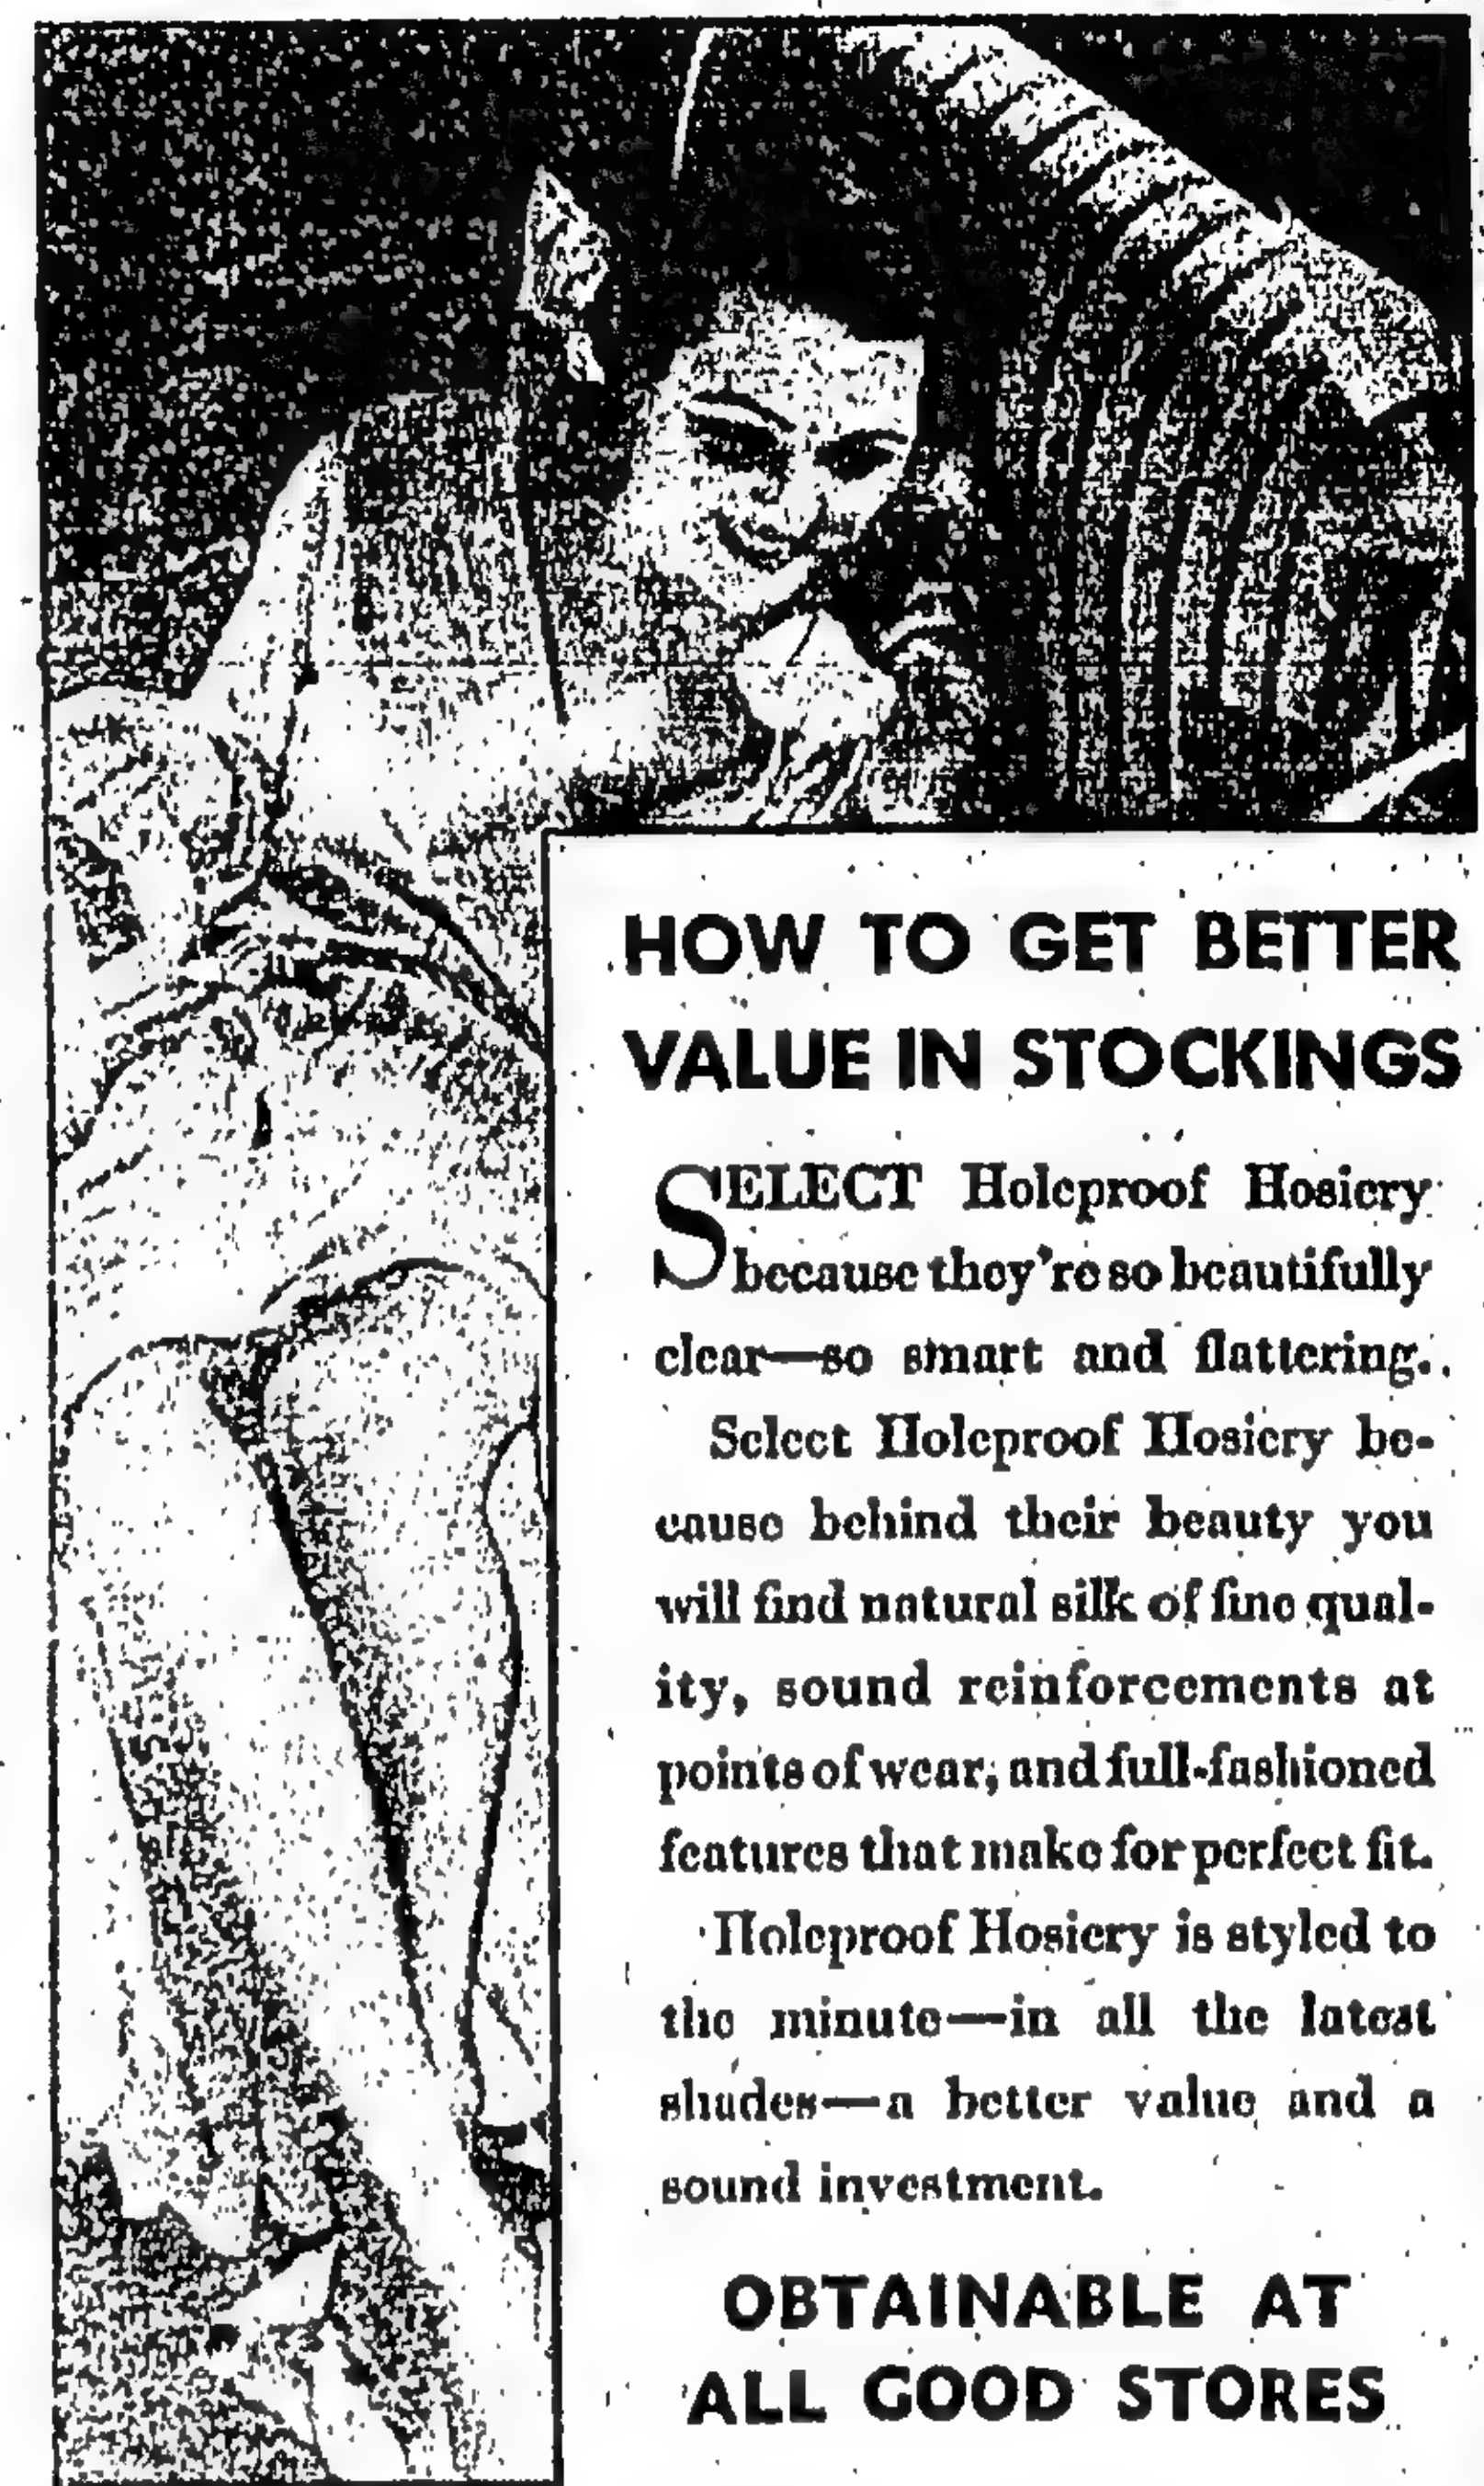

He quarrelled with Realing over a dog.

He accused Johnson and Realing of snooping around a radium and gold mine which he said he had located. There are no known deposits of radium, however, in the area.

The police place little credence in the fantastic "werewolf" angle to the youth's confession as to the killing of calves and drinking their warm blood.

Cramer was arrested originally for theft of cattle. It was while ranchers were seeking missing calves that Mangan's body was found, when the killing was traced to Cramer. Then the astounding confession began to flow from the bragging youth.

THE SILENT GUIDE TO HONG KONG.

WHAT IT IS: The "Silent Guide" consists of a large illuminated street map of Hong Kong (18 feet by 6 feet). The map, which is coloured, is painted on a ground glass background, behind which are over 5,000 small lamps. At a convenient distance from the large map is a small switchboard containing a number of six inch glass panels for subscribers' names, addresses and telephone numbers, each with its own button switch.

WHERE IT WILL BE: At the entrance to the Star Ferry Wharf (Hong Kong side) where it will be seen by 90% of the tourists and other visitors arriving at Hong Kong, besides the many thousands of residents who make daily use of the Star Ferry on their way to and from business.

WHAT IT WILL DO: If anyone wishes to find the location of an office, hotel, theatre, bank, shop or other business in Hong Kong, he goes to the switchboard where he finds the names of subscribers, properly classified and arranged alphabetically. He presses the appropriate button and the subscriber's name on the panel board immediately lights up. At the same time, on the large street map, a coloured lamp will show the exact position of the office or shop, etc., he is looking for, and the quickest route will also be indicated by lighting up the road to be taken right the way from the Star Ferry to his destination. Bus and tram routes will be shown by special coloured lamps. Subscribers' names will be in Chinese as well as English if desired, and an attendant will be stationed at the Switchboard to give assistance to strangers if required.

WHAT IT WILL COST: The service is free to the general public, and only a nominal charge will be made to subscribers of $36 per year per name panel. This fee will include a free insertion of the subscriber's name, address, particulars of his business, agencies carried, etc., in

THE "SILENT GUIDE" DIRECTORY which will be published in conjunction with the "Silent Guide" and which may be obtained from the attendant at the Star Ferry for ten cents. The Directory will contain a small replica of the large illuminated map for recording, with a pencil, any position or route located on the large map.

THE "SILENT GUIDE" INVENTION is the property of the Tel-tell World Publishing Co., Rutton House, Duddell Street, who will be pleased to reserve name panel spaces on application. Patents have been applied for. The installation, which is expected to take six weeks from the time when the names of intending subscribers have been collected, is in the hands of Messrs. H. W. Buckingham & Co., Tai Ping Building.

FANLING HOLD-UP

AMERICANS ROBBED BY ARMED GANG

A particularly audacious robbery was carried out in broad daylight, at about 4 p.m. yesterday, when Mr. D. E. O'Kieffe and Mr. and Mrs. L. R. Cramer, of the National City Bank, were held up in the Sheungshui district, near Fanling, by a gang of five armed robbers, who took money and articles to the value of $60 from them and escaped.

Mr. O'Kieffe, who is a popular member of the American community and a keen baseball player, was driving in a motor car with Mr. and Mrs. Cramer, from Fanling to Kowloon. Near the Wo Lok Shek village, in the Sheung Shui district, the car was forced to slow down because the road was under repair. While the car was moving thus at a walking pace, five Chinese, armed with revolvers, jumped on the running board and ordered the driver to stop. When this had been done, the robbers made their victims alight and searched them.

Mr. O'Kieffe was relieved of $5.20, and Mr. Cramer of $2 in ten cents pieces, while Mrs. Cramer suffered the loss of a pair of gold-rimmed spectacles, valued at $50, and a black jannaped cigarette case. When the robbers ascertained that there was nothing more of value to be had, they disappeared through the paddy fields, making good their escape.

It is understood that a Customs Officer happened to be passing shortly afterwards, and informed the police, who set the usual activities on foot, but so far no arrests have been made.

NEWSPAPER MAGNATE

Tokyo, Oct. 7.
Mr. and Mrs. Roy Howard, visiting here on a Far East tour which ends in Manila, have been besieged by newspapermen and showered with invitations. They are remaining for a week before commencing a tour of the islands.—United Press.

FOUR LOITERERS CAUGHT

PLANNING TO ROB PASSENGERS

Arrested at the entrance of the Star Ferry Wharf after they had attempted to rob a passenger about to board a bus on the No. 1 route, three unemployed men, Ho Ping-nam, 24, Chui Nut, 17, and Choi Chuen, aged 17, were brought before Mr. Macfadyen at the Central Police Court this morning, charged with loitering with intent.

Ho Ping-nam, who admitted seven previous convictions, was sentenced to three months' hard labour. A fine of $50 or, in default, one month, was imposed on each of the other two defendants, both of whom had a previous conviction. Choi Chuen was bound over three years ago for stealing from a person.

Detective Sergeant Fowle stated that several complaints had been received from the China Motor Bus Company concerning thefts from passengers. On Saturday, at about 7.15 p.m. two detectives were on special duty and they saw the three defendants peering into people's pockets as they emerged from the wharf. They picked out a victim and the third defendant obstructed the entrance to the bus. Meanwhile the other two defendants urged their victim on, but they were unable to steal.

Ho Ping-nam said he had nothing to say and admitted the intent to steal, while the other two defendants claimed they were at the wharf watching people fishing.

ANOTHER CASE

Lo Ngau, 24, unemployed, was fined $50, with the alternative of one month's hard labour, on a charge of loitering with intent at Connaught Road Central near the Yunnai Ferry Wharf on Saturday afternoon. A detective on duty on No. 1 route saw the defendant seated between two Chinese passengers, dressed in European style clothing, and look into their pockets. Det-Sgt. Fowle prosecuted.

This is a detailed black and white topographical map of Ethiopia. The map uses contour lines and shading to represent the country's rugged terrain, including the Great Rift Valley and various mountain ranges. Major rivers are depicted with solid lines, and smaller water bodies are shown with wavy lines. The map is divided into administrative regions, each labeled with its name in capital letters. Neighboring countries are also labeled: Sudan to the west, Somalia to the south, and Arabia to the east. A scale bar is located in the bottom left corner, and a north arrow is positioned in the bottom right corner. The map includes numerous place names, including Addis Ababa, the capital, and other significant cities and towns. The overall style is that of a traditional cartographic map, with a focus on geographical accuracy and detail.

The above impression of the physical features of Ethiopia, specially drawn for the "Illustrated London News" by Mr. G. H. Davis, gives some idea of the nature of the country in which fighting is now occurring.

Whatever it is that is being watched—cricket, racing, the stage, boxing, yachting or tennis—a TELESPEC, by bringing things nearer, virtually puts the user into a better seat than he has paid for. More than that; it does it without the arms aching and the neck being cricked through the hands having to be kept up to the eyes all the time—as with an ordinary binocular. The TELESPEC is worn—like spectacles. It leaves the hands free and enables moving objects to be followed just as easily as if ordinary spectacles were being worn.

Now—TELESPECs are supplied complete in English made solid "London Colour" leather, velvet lined cases with nickel clasps and shoulder straps.

BRITAIN'S NAVAL POLICY

Despite official denials of London press reports that Britain contemplates a big programme of new naval construction, there can be little doubt that plans to this end are under serious consideration. The situation created by Japan's opposition to the ratio system, coupled with the indications that there is small prospect of a new naval conference being held this year, would appear to dictate the necessity of Britain taking every possible step to increase her naval strength. It is now generally conceded that, anxious to prevent a costly armaments race, Britain has permitted the effectiveness of her Navy to become seriously undermined. The British Government had hoped that it would have been possible to reassemble the Naval Conference this year, and some weeks ago sounded the other leading naval powers regarding the prospects of such a course. Provision for such a conference was made in the London Naval Treaty of 1930, which, with the Washington Naval Treaty, is due to expire at the end of the present year. Thus it was considered that, during 1935, the situation should be considered with a view to reducing naval armaments still further, if possible. Unhappily, there is small likelihood of this hope being realised. It was only a few weeks ago that the British Admiralty made proposals the adoption of which, it was hoped, would at least mitigate the costs and risks of an unchecked race in naval armaments. Perhaps the proposals were too simple to have produced any real effect. They were to the effect that the chief naval countries should be asked to lay on the table their building programmes for several years ahead, and that at the October conference an attempt should be made to draw up some kind of treaty, with pledges not to exceed the announced programmes. From the start there were doubts as to whether such a scheme would work, and in particular it was felt that there would have to be an "escalator" clause enabling the parties to denounce the treaty at any time. With the outlook thus, it was feared that countries, in announcing their naval requirements, would be tempted to over-estimate them, thus leading to further over-estimates on the

NOTES OF THE DAY

LIBERALS' FUTURE

As a General Election approaches, many Liberals must be asking themselves what their future is to be. If their policy be one of rigid non-co-operation with either the Government or the Socialists, it is a future that is bound to be blank enough. On the other hand, is there any sound reason, or are their sufficient reasons, why they should hold aloof and thereby condemn themselves to futility in the business of governing the country? The question is examined candidly and impartially by Sir Alfred H. Watson, from the point of view of those who have a tradition of Liberalism over several generations in their families. He finds that tariff policy is almost the sole obstacle to assisting the Government. But many Liberals, howling to the march of events, and recognising that Cobdenite principles have no perpetual applicability, have already found that tariffs are no obstacle to co-operation. It may be easy enough to point to one or two respects in which the country is not better off under fiscal reform than under Free Trade; but the situation must be judged as a whole, and when that is done it will be admitted that this country has made more substantial progress along the path of industrial and commercial recovery than any other.

EMPLOYMENT FIGURES

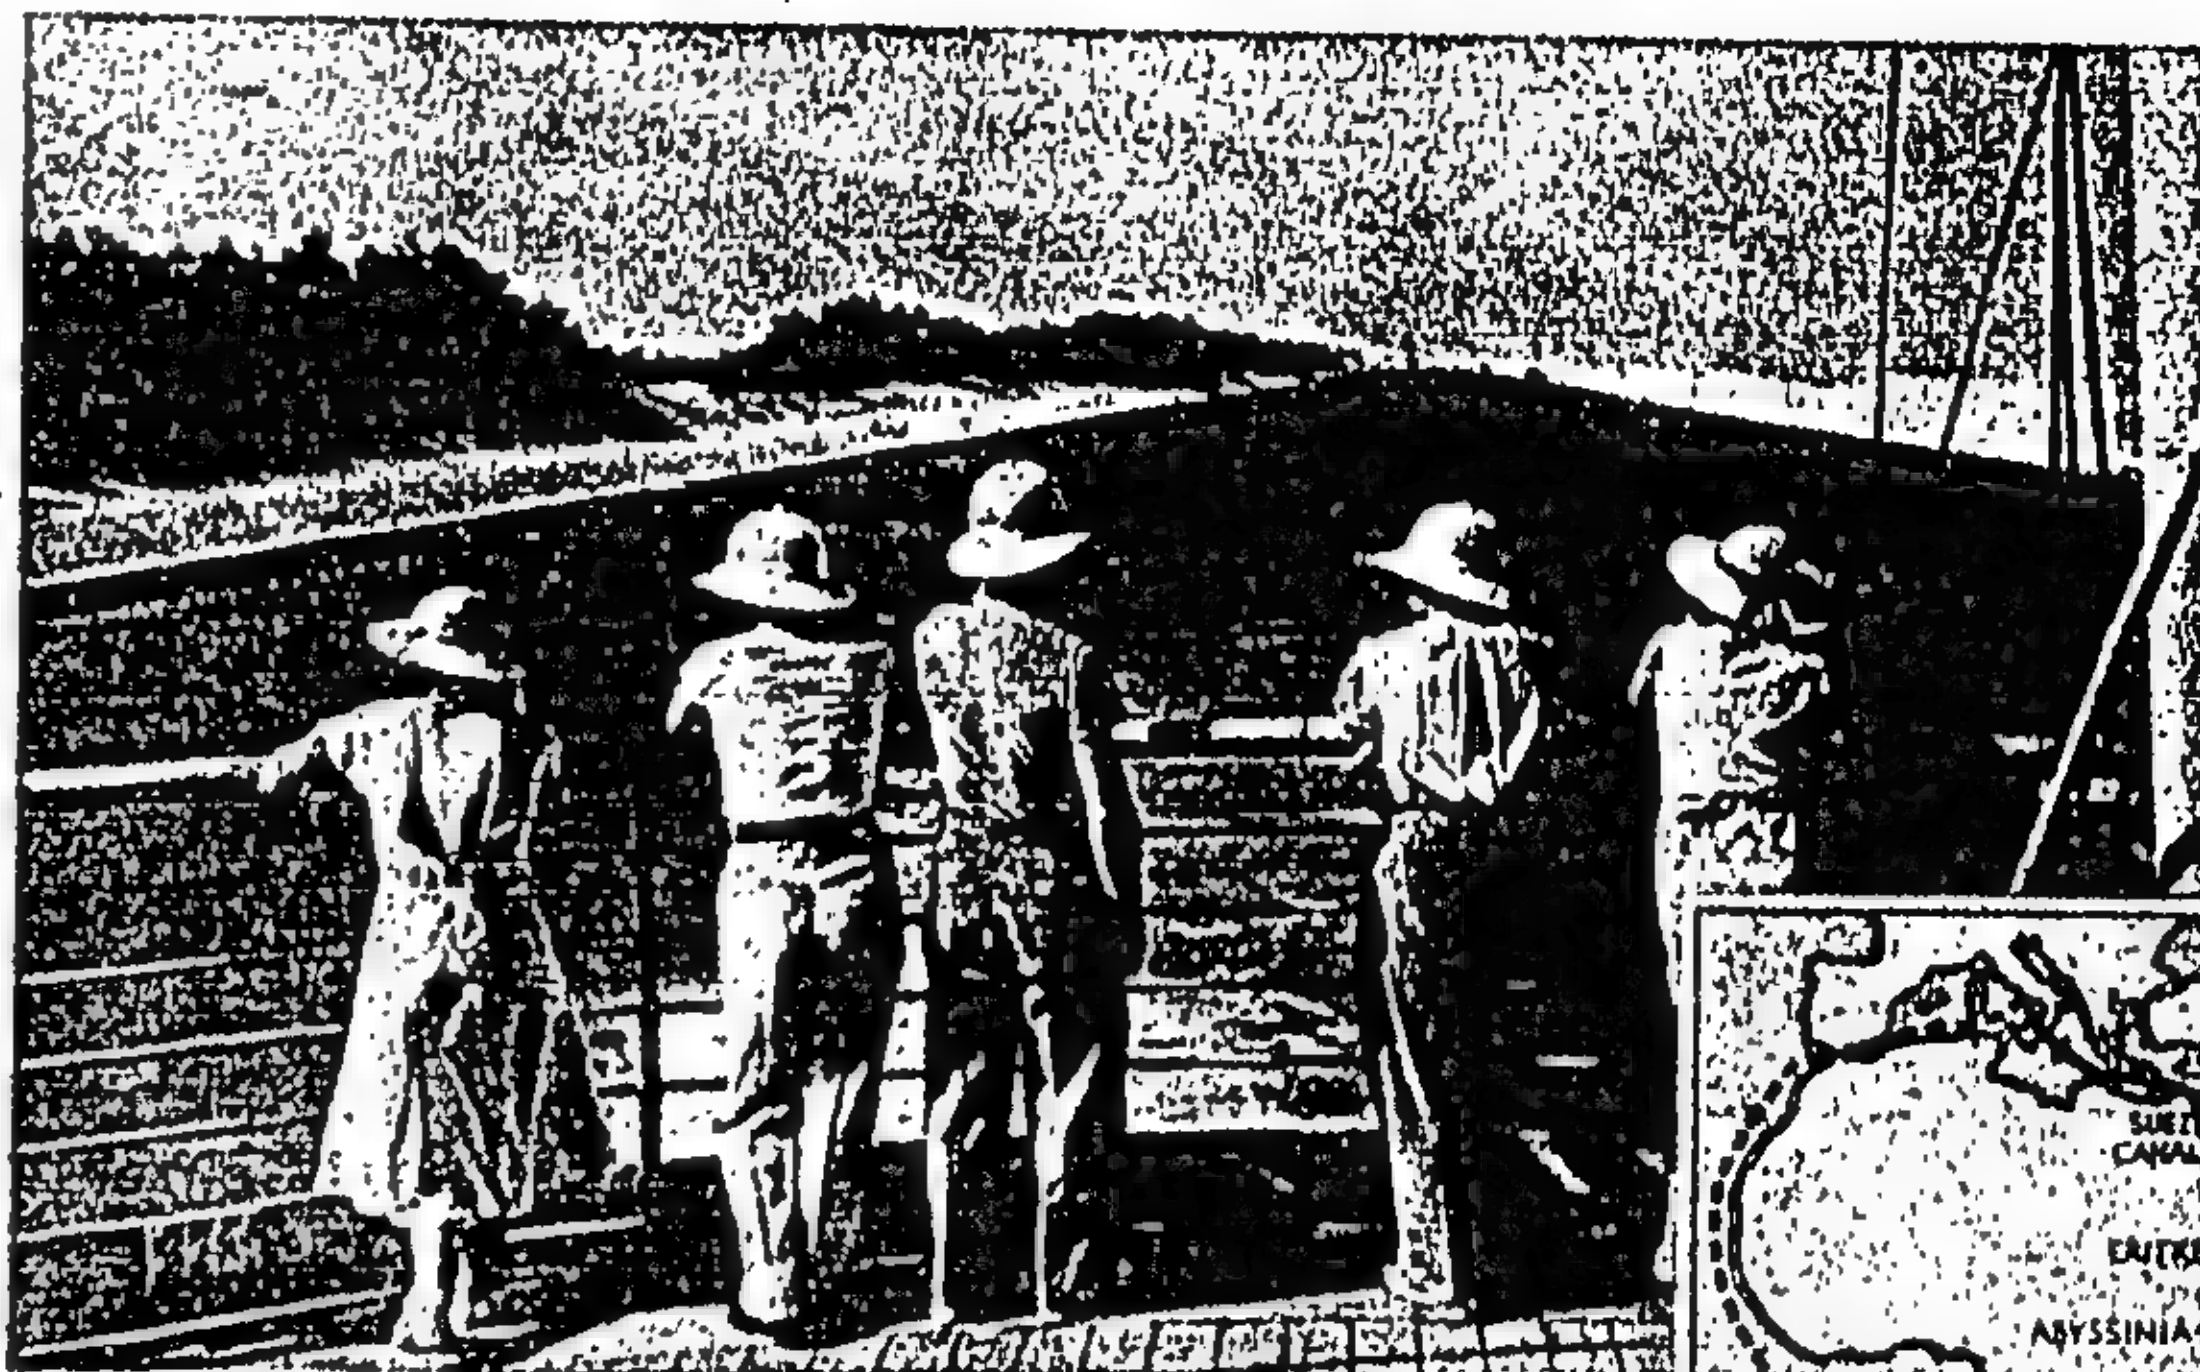

The latest returns of employment emphasise that point. The tariff system, moreover, is adaptable and elastic, modifiable where necessary. It is a matter of business rather than one of politics. That is as it should be. Liberals will have to make up their minds. The independent section of their party continues to be divided into various factions, the result of which appears to be beyond hope. There is no commanding voice that all will rally to support. And if, at any future date, the electors should allow the pendulum to swing, it will assuredly not be to Liberalism. The issue is between Socialism and that system of sound husbandry for which the supporters of the present Government, be they Unionist, Liberal, or Socialist, stand. The Independent Liberals, by pursuing their present course, condemn themselves to what Sir Alfred Watson calls spending the remainder of their lives in the sterility of opposition.

A SIGN OF GRACE

An unusually large number of American film stars of both sexes have been visiting this country during recent months, and it now appears that besides the holiday-making urge that sends so many Americans to Europe they have had a more serious purpose, namely the learning of the English language. That is a sign of grace. Even in the United States there seems to be an increasing conviction that the American accent as it is frequently heard on the film leaves room for improvement. Here it has lost its novelty and, except among small boys, has ceased to fascinate. Several of the more prominent American stars rub down the edges of their speech, presumably with a view to making the best of both worlds, namely, the New and the Old. And the increasing popularity of British films in the United States, a reward of their improving merit, has been doing some good propaganda work in favour of English as it is spoken on this side of the Atlantic. The British market is too profitable for Hollywood to ignore, and as British competition grows we may expect the American magnates to pay more and more attention to our needs and preferences, instead of adopting an attitude of take-it-or-leave-it. This looks like improving the tone of the screen in a new sense.

part of the others. It is now clear that there will be no conference this month, if at all during the current year. Those who want to see peace preserved cannot but regret the fate of the London and Washington Treaties, which represented one of the few real pieces of genuine disarmament since the Great War. Unless something can be put in their place, the cost to taxpayers everywhere will be heavy, and the loss in international security even more serious. In the circumstances, however, Britain cannot be blamed for determining to see to it that her own safety is not jeopardised by increased building on the part of other nations.

SHALL we close the SUEZ CANAL?

May Hold Secret of Peace for Abyssinia

Scarcely a hundred miles in length—but it saves Italian vessels an extra journey of 8,000 miles. A view down the length of the Suez Canal—which might conceivably be closed as a means of separating Italy and Abyssinia.

"If Italy wants to go to war with Ethiopia," it has been suggested in many quarters, "let Russia that it would regard any attempt to interfere with the canal as a 'menace to India.' ... was placed on the sending of the Russian Government re-arms to both countries equally pled that it would not injure the canal in any way."

In the Spanish-American War the Egyptian Government allowed the Spanish fleet on the way to Manila to coal at the canal only after it promised to return to Spain. In the Russo-Japanese War of 1904 the British Government allowed Russian warships to go through the canal in spite of the fact that they were on their way to fight Japan, Britain's ally. Italian warships passed through the canal during the Italian-Turkish War of 1911 in spite of the fact that Egypt was then part of Turkey. At the outbreak of the world war the British military command issued an order that no enemy vessel was to enter the canal. Although Turkey contended this was a violation of the Convention of 1888, British authorities justified it on the ground of defending the canal.

The closing of the canal, if effectively carried out, would make it almost impossible for a country in the position of Italy to carry on war in Abyssinia.

Instead of having a journey of 2,000 miles for her troops, for her supplies, and for her sick and wounded, she would be faced with a journey of about 10,000 miles to be carried out round the whole of Africa, and it is doubtful whether any coaling stations would be available for her vessels on the way. In any case, the cost of warfare under such conditions would be impossible.

A study published by the Geneva Research Centre in co-operation with the Foreign Policy Association, examines the question whether the League of Nations may close the Suez Canal to an aggressor State.

Written by Mr. Raymond Leslie Buell, president of the Foreign Policy Association, the study declares that there may be room for disagreement upon the following points:—

1. The Convention of 1888, providing that the canal shall "always be free to all nations of commerce or of war," in force to-day?

Does the British Government have legal jurisdiction over the canal?

Does the League Covenant supersede the Convention of 1888 in so far as the two are incompatible?

UNDERLYING the immediate problem of whether the Suez Canal may be closed by the League is the fundamental question of whether the great canals of the world, both Suez and Panama, should be internationalised.

In 1882 British forces were landed at Ismailia and closed the canal for several days. During the Franco-German War of 1870 the warships of both belligerents passed through the canal freely, Egypt, instead of Great Britain, but a critical condition arose upon the outbreak of the Russo-

THE status of the Suez Canal to-day may be summarised as follows:—

1. The canal is operated by a private Egyptian company, a minority of the stock being owned by the British Government, upon the basis of a concession granted by the Egyptian Government which expires in 1968.

2. The Convention of Constantinople of 1888 provides that the canal shall "always be free and open in time of war, as in time of peace, to every vessel of commerce or of war without distinction of flag," and that the defence of the canal should in the last instance be referred to the Council of Europe.

3. The British Government established a unilateral protection over Egypt in 1914 and Nations may close the canal to enemy warships; the protectorate was terminated in 1922 subject to a reservation in regard to the defence of the canal.

4. Egypt is nevertheless the territorial sovereign over the canal, but is not a member of the League nor has it acceded to the Convention of 1888.

5. Egypt has made no treaty recognising the British claim to defend the canal.

6. There is room for disagreement as to whether (a) the Convention of 1888 is still in force; (b) the British Government has a legal right to protect the canal.

SHOULD the Council proceed to authorise the British Government to close the canal under Article XX of the Covenant, it might be open to the Italian Government to challenge such action before the Permanent Court under the optional clause.

The Italian Government could contend that the Convention of 1888 was still in force and that passed through the canal freely, Egypt, instead of Great Britain, but a critical condition arose alone had jurisdiction over the canal.

Two—or 10,000 Miles? This map shows plainly what the use of the Suez Canal means to Mussolini. The bold line is the course his troops take at present. The broken line shows how they would have to go if the canal were closed.

The Very Idea!

It's Better To Be Cramped For Space Than To Have Cramp in Your Wrist

Mr. Kelly, the eminent journalist, is not at all put out about having only two thirds of a column in to-day's issue of the Telegraph. In fact, he would have filled it up with one paragraph if the Editor hadn't caught him bribing the typist to set his only copy in the largest type available.

"Be staccato," said the Editor to us, when he told us the set-up man had left us only a part of a column in which to fit our pearls of wit.

We don't know what staccato means, but it sounds like the stuff they use to chuck on the walls of buildings so that the cockroaches and rats can get a grip for their toes when they're climbing up to the rafters. If it's not that, it's the stuff they feed the Italian troops on.

Slavery still exists in Ethiopia, but Mussolini is pure doing his best to wipe it out.—Staccato Joke No. 1.

League of Nations should have a radio police force. Then when these dictators started playing up like Muss, they could be brought to heel with—"Calling all Cezars, Calling All Cezars."—Staccato Joke No. 2.

"As they march, the huge black Eritrean soldiers chant, 'Mussolini for ever. The white whippers of Betasie will make a bribe to polish the shoes of Mussolini.'

Muss, is going to make a mess Of Lion of Judah's moult.

To which the Lion replied, "Oh, yes? Well, if Muss, must he must."

See by Saturday's paper that Italy has called for volunteers in the United States. Now that all the war baby class have been called up for service, there's only the boys in their teens left to join. Following is suggested stirring appeal (thought up, free of charge, by famous Hongkong writer) and passed on to modern Caesar for what it is worth:

"Friends, Romans, countrymen! Lend me your heins!"

Editor's comment: Best of impassioned appeal obliterated by beer stains. Eddie's comment: Doesn't matter. Our column is the full.

Mr. Edward Kelly has much pleasure in accepting the kind invitation of the Chairman and Board of Directors of the Hongkong & Shanghai Banking Corporation to the Opening of their new branch along the road. Any time the Chairman and Board of Directors feel like a spot of gin and bitters or a little game of poker, Mr. Kelly has much pleasure in reciprocating their invitation by requesting the pleasure of their Company at his Mansion in Room 37 of the Y.M.C.A.

PROGRESSADOWA MASSACRE
AVENGEDTERRIFIC HARDSHIPS OF DESERT WAR

Rome, Oct. 6.

The scope of Italian operations is now becoming clearer. While troops from the north are drawn up along a sixty mile front in close contact with the enemy, another force, composed mostly of native troops from South Eritrea, is advancing to the south-west, attempting to cut the Addis Ababa-Djibouti railroad.These men are faced with terrific hardships. They have already occupied Mount Moussaali and are now moving towards the oasis of Aussa. To reach that point they must traverse a hundred miles of waterless desert, where the temperature approaches 120 degrees.After they reach Aussa the going will be much easier, for they will be following the bed of the Auasch River. This, in some months of the year, is a raging torrent. It is certain that the Ethiopians will harass the advance along this route seriously.The Third Army is moving out of Somaliland in a north-easterly direction and is consolidating its self around the desert wells. It has already occupied Ghergubul.The operations are proceeding circumspectly, especially with regard to water supplies. In face of the danger of the wells being poisoned, the men are served out a daily ration of two litres of water each. Each unit is followed by long columns of mules bearing goat-skins of drinking water.—

ROME CELEBRATES

Rome, Oct. 6.

News of the fall of Adowa was not released here until 8 o'clock to-night, but it spread like wildfire when it was finally announced.
It was plastered up on tramcars and chalked on the walls of houses.The city speedily came to life and joyfully cheered, waving flags and parading with spluttering torches. Rome was in fête.
Crowds marched along the Piazza Colonna but were discourageed from marching to the Piazza Venezia, Signor Mussolini evidently not desiring to appear to acknowledge the plaudits of the people from his balcony.However, Il Duce flashed a message to General Debono, High Commissioner for the Italian Colonies, saying: "News of the reconquest of Adowa fills all Italians with pride."—Reuter.

DEFEAT AVENGED

avenged when the Ethiopians defending Adowa were defeated before a pounding bombardment of aeroplanes and artillery and retreated before a massed tank andETHIOPIA'S LACK OF ARMAMENTS"SEND US BULLETS AND GUNS"VOLUNTEERS NOT WANTED

Addis Ababa, Oct. 5.

Ethiopia wants guns and munitions for her army, not untrained men from abroad as volunteers.
She could have had thousands of the latter; in the former she is sadly deficient.Foreign arms embargoes are the answer. Shipments have been held up in European ports when they were already aboard ship.
Others have been stopped after being paid for.And the army is at war with probably the most heterogeneous collection of weapons ever put in the field. There are the shining modern Mausers of the imperial army; there are a handful of modern machine rifles, machine guns, artillery and anti-aircraft units. And beyond that, in the provincial forces and in the levies which have been mobilized to defend the country, there is every conceivable type of rifle from Loefflers of 1870 down to their great-grand sons of comparatively modern make.Whether many of them are safe to shoot off is still an open question; and with munitions stores scanty at best, where the scores of types of ammunition necessary to charge them can be found is a problem to turn any General Staff gray."They should offer us guns and bullets, not their own services," say Ethiopians, referring to the volunteers from abroad.

PLENTY OF VOLUNTEERS

There have been enough of them. There was Mr. Zeb Angel of the Angel Brothers' Hospital, Franklin, N.C., who offered two coloured divisions, fully equipped with the best arm, provided Ethiopia had the ships to transport them. Mr. Angel was also ready, although he admitted he had none on hand at the moment, to supply 20,000 negro aviators trained for combat, provided Ethiopia has the planes. It has eight. There have been scores of other letters in the same tone.There have also been applications from adventurers, jobless and ex-soldiers from every corner of the earth. It is estimated there could have been several thousand recruited in Northern Europe alone, many thousands in America where negro feeling swings so strongly toward Ethiopia, and so on. Political exiles—it is said many Austrian Legionnaires have applied—have been refused. Except for a French flying officer and the handful of Swedes and Belgians in the military missions, there is no foreign military man in Ethiopia pay. The reasons for the refusal of the others are clear.First, Ethiopia does not need man-power. Secondly, it cannot afford to transport men from all corners of the world. Thirdly, it needs all the equipment it can get for its own army. At the best, there are glaring deficiencies.Finally, there are the mountains,
the chasms, the fever-ridden valleys, the bush, the disease, and the deserts where even the highland Amharas do not care to fight
if they can avoid it. Foreigners would be little use under such conditions, without long acclimatization.Ethiopians believe the Italians will discover that, too, before very long.—United Press.RADIO

CORRESPONDENCE

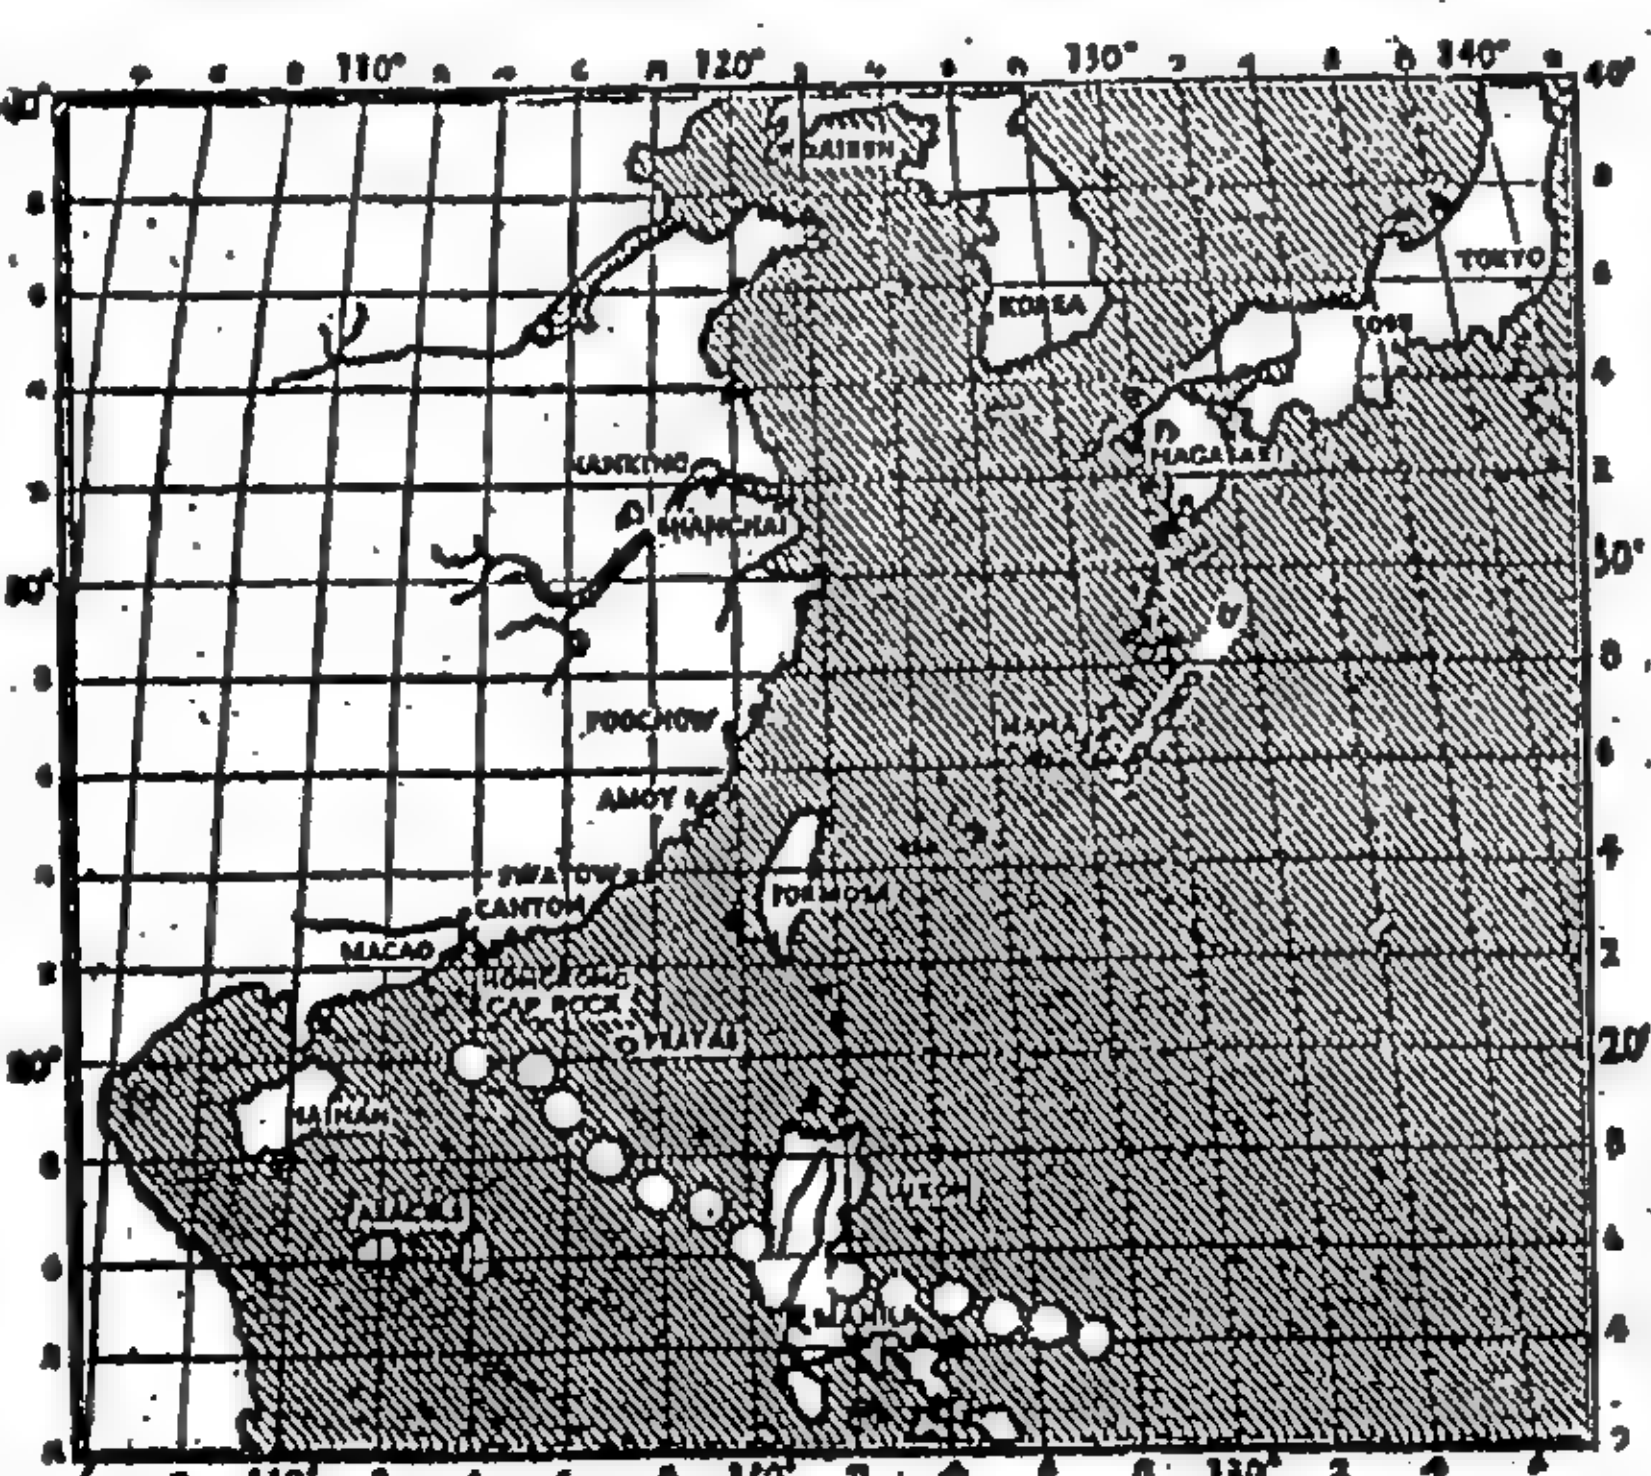

Appreciation

(To The Editor, Hongkong Telegraph)Sir,—May I, through your valuable columns express my gratitude to the Army man who rendered such excellent first-aid to me on the 2nd instant at the Sookunpo Football Ground? Had it not been for him I would have been dead some days ago. I was one of the spectators and it was during the interval that I suddenly fainted and recollected nothing after that except being carried away by an Army man wearing an armlet marked "M.P." who gave me something to drink which revived me from what seemed to be total unconsciousness.The purpose of this correspondence is not only for me to thank the Army man (I would very much like to do this personally, if he would call at Dennis & Co., National Bank Building) but also for me to intimate to the public the sports and indiscriminate assistance the Army people are willing to render to helpless Chinese. Let this be a tip to all football players to refrain from rough play (as was evidenced in former seasons) and adopt the "M.P.'s" attitude as an example to follow in this cosmopolitan Colony of ours.—Yours, etc.

CHINESE AWAY

CURTAINED PROGRAMME FOR WEEK-END

(By "Sagax")

CHINA'S National Games which commence in Shanghai on Thursday next have attracted the majority of the local Chinese footballers and during the past week the South China and Chinese Athletic players went North to represent the Colony and Canton during the meet.

As a result of the absence of these teams from the Colony only a curtailed programme of matches was carried out over the week-end.

WHERE do the Chinese football fans go on a Saturday afternoon when their favourite teams are away from the Colony?

CHINESE supporters of the game of soccer in Hongkong confine their interest almost entirely to the activities of the South China and Chinese Athletic Associations.

At a rough computation these two clubs between them attract as many spectators as all the other teams put together.

SURPRISE WIN

ST. JOSEPH'S SECURE ANOTHER VICTORY

IN striking contrast to the heavy scoring of the previous week, only three goals were recorded by the six teams which were engaged in First Division football on Saturday, the East Lanesshire Regiment claiming two against Kowloon and St. Joseph's netting once against the Club.

It would seem that the surprise team of the season is going to be the St. Joseph's eleven although it is yet too early to take their present position at the top of the league seriously.

AGAINST the Kowloon Football Club last week the Collegians won by six goals to one but the Division side are last year's wooden-spoonists and they look likely to continue hovering round the bottom of the league.

HOWEVER, last Saturday's feat against the Club has marked the St. Joseph's Football Club as a potential force in the local league this season and if they are not among the leading teams at the end of the season they should not fail to give a good account of themselves in their different matches.

ON paper the eleven are nothing like as formidable as when they were runners-up to the South Wales Borderers three seasons ago but they have some promising recruits. Gurubach Singh, who was in the Radio team in the Second Division last season, is showing improved form in the higher class and is making an ideal leader for his new team.

SELECTION OF A SUITABLE SITE

TRACK AND FIELD ATHLETES

Chicago, Oct. 6.

The American Olympic Track and Field Committee has announced selection of the new $2,500,000 stadium on Randall's Island, N. Y., as the scene of final tryouts for the 1936 Olympic track and field team. The trials will be held on July 10 and 11, 1936.

Other bids were received from Chicago, Dallas, Philadelphia, and Princeton University, William J. Bingham, chairman, who was named manager of the squad, announced. The new invitation was selected on condition that the stadium be completed and suitably equipped.

For the fourth consecutive year, Lawson Robertson of the University of Pennsylvania was named coach of the team. He will be assisted by T. Nelson Metcalfe, University of Chicago, and Dean Crowell, University of Southern California.

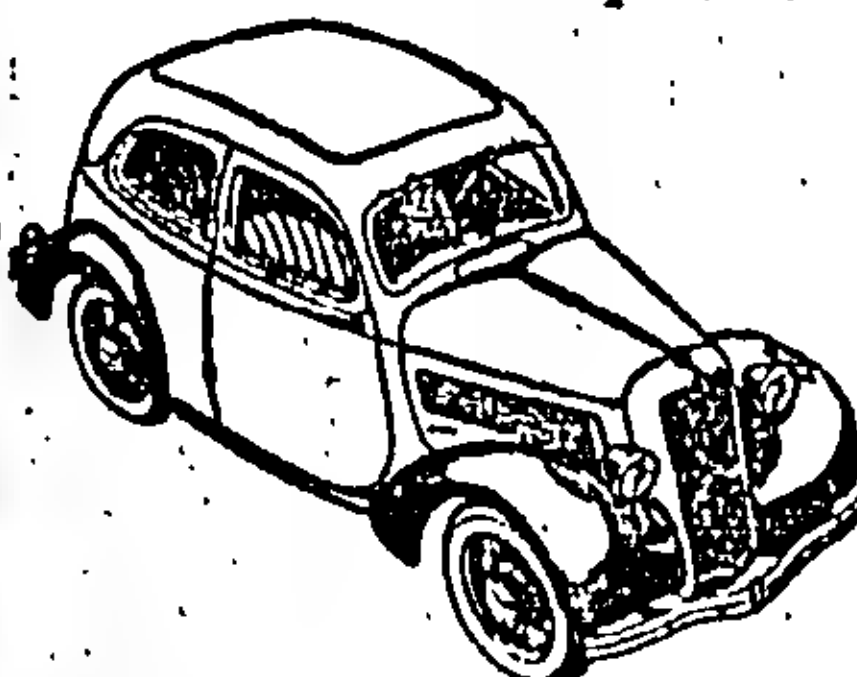

Bingham's assistants will be Edwin F. Schaeffer, Buffalo, New York; Joseph T. England, Baltimore, Maryland, and A. Masters, Leland Stanford University, California.

Regional trials will be held early next summer. —United Press.

Plymouth Argyle's search for an outside right ended recently with the transfer, at a substantial fee, of Bernard Oxley, from Sheffield Wednesday, and formerly of Sheffield United and Chesterfield. Argyle have also signed for extensive trials Charles Lennon, a half-back from St. James Gate, Dublin, and Jack Green, right half, from a Lancashire junior club.

TONY CANZONERI BEATS AL ROTH

New York, Oct. 5.

Age against youth was the theme for the lightweight boxing championship bout over fifteen rounds at Madison Garden to-night in which Tony Canzoneri defeated Al Roth on points.

Canzoneri, the thirty year old champion of the light-weights has slowed up considerably since he regained the title early in May of this year. Although he is now, last year's champion, he has not defended his title, since all bouts were over the weight.

Experts who have seen Tony in his latest fights say that the spring has gone from his legs and the dynamite from his fists. His long ring career which covers half his life, is nearing its end.

Although this has been heard before, it seems more likely to be true now. The boy just goes on fighting for the love of it. The money he has earned would comfortably retire him on his farm for the rest of his life. It cannot be that he is looking for more glory because he has more than his share with titles as light-weight, junior welterweight, and feather-weight champion.

THE CHALLENGER

Al Roth, unsuccessful challenger, has just passed his twenty-second birthday and has been fighting for four years. In his last two fights he upset two of the best lightweights in the business. First, he was Lenard Del Genio, the hard hitting former golden-gloves champion. Then, with the right to challenge for the lightweight title at stake he defeated the 3-1 favourite Davey Day, the Illinois Boxing Commission's No. 1 challenger.

He has come through his four years of fighting without being knocked out once. In this forty fights, his four losses can be directly attributed to a hand injury which prevented him from delivering his famous left hook. Last year his manager ordered an operation performed on the bruised sinew in the back of his left hand, and since then the hand has been perfect.

Since his operation he has reversed two of the decisions against him and the other two fighters have refused to meet him.

Both Canzoneri and Roth are the same type of fighters, clever boxers, and men that carry a punch in both hands.

Bobby Pacho, the Mexican lightweight, had Tony on the floor at Chicago in July, and Pacho is a light hitter as compared to Al Roth, who was in fine shape for to-night's fight after training seriously at Madame Roy's training camp, at Summit, N.J., for nearly a month. —United Press.

covered from saving first time. When the Fusiliers goalkeeper caught the ball he appeared to have drawn it into the goal before throwing it out when charged but the referee was unsighted.

McHardy, the police custodian, was very safe and saved many difficult shots.

The match was played at a fast and furious pace throughout and some good healthy football was seen.

It is noteworthy that during the last several years when the title has been won by a foreigner in the Men's Singles Championship it has always been won by nationals the following year. —United Press.

CASUALTIES IN THE GAME

(By Frank M. Carruthers)

London, Sept. 9.

Though the football season in England has been running only a week a problem has arisen which is causing the authorities great concern.

At the meeting of the League Management Committee at Portsmouth on Saturday steps were taken to straighten out the complicated legal position which has occurred in regard to the insurance of players.

There are four men at present whose claims for compensation for injuries which have compelled their retirement from the game cannot be met. It has been legally decided that because they earn £300 a year they are no longer "workmen" and are not entitled to compensation at the maximum rate of 30s. a week.

The authorities are the trustees of the insurance fund subscribed by the clubs. Until the clubs sanction compensation to players who have been placed outside the scheme by the legal decision, the authorities must withhold payments if claimed.

GRANT TO PLAYER

The position is to be explained to the clubs, who I have no doubt, will rectify it. Meanwhile, a compassionate grant has been made to one of the players.

The whole question of insurance is hedged round which legal difficulties, one which it is felt must be decided, is the age limit of a player's career. A man of 32 commands the same compensation as one ten years younger, and it has never been laid down at what age it can be said that he has ceased to retain his playing qualifications.

The amount disbursed to injured players is about £20,000 a year, the clubs contributing one per cent, of their gate receipts for the purpose.

There are too many injuries in the game. On Saturday Blair, the Aston Villa back, fractured a bone in his leg and Dean, the Everton centre forward, broke a toe.

Blair's accident occurred in a collision with an opponent and it was remarkable that he continued to play for ten minutes. The presumption was that the injury was aggravated by remaining on the field.

But a suggestion that the accidents are due to rough play is a very unfair reflection on the players. I have already seen six matches and there has not been a deliberate foul in one of them.

THE Royal Navy and the Army, during the past two seasons, have erected stands which will now accommodate something like 5,000 spectators each. By no stretch of the imagination can it be said that these improvements and enlargements were made to accommodate their own supporters.

CLUB DE RECREIO AND LINCOLNS DRAW

WEAKENED PORTUGUESE SIDE DEFEND STUBBORNLY AGAINST SOLDIERS

(By "Sagax")

Lincolnshire 0 Club de Recreio 0

Lincolnshire:—Reed; Edmundson and Ash; Thompson, Deeming and Robinson; Clayton, Malpas, Higgins, Ridley and Baldry.

Club de Recreio:—Marques; Maher and Bowen; Fernandes, Delgado and V. Marques; Gonsalves, Castilho, Campos and Alves.

Football that was never worthy of two teams participating in the top class in the Colony, was served up by the Lincolnshire Regiment and the Club de Recreio at Sookunpoo on Saturday afternoon when the weakened Portuguese side rather covered themselves with glory by holding the soldiers to a goalless draw.

Three reserves were introduced into the Club de Recreio team, the Gonsalves, the captain, was also away. The brothers are on the injured list, following the previous week's match against the Police but they hope to be available again next Saturday.

Campos (at centre-forward), Fernandes (right half) and Maher (right back) were drawn from the second division to deputise for the absentees.

Malpas was introduced into the forward line in the place of Turner in the Lincolnshire side while Thompson came into the side at half back to enable Edmundson to partner Ash at back.

OPPORTUNITIES GO BEGGING

Indecision on the part of the Lincolnshire forwards when marked by the opposition defenders made the openings to go begging and it was due to their inability to take full advantage of all opportunities that the soldiers failed to secure both points after they had had almost all of the play.

The combination among the five forwards on the military side was good up to a point. When the ball had been manoeuvred to a favourable spot one or the other of the attackers would allow himself to be robbed or would relieve a pressing situation by sending wide.

The principal contributory factor to the soldiers' failures was the about defence which the Portuguese put up against a rather slow moving forward line. To cope with the disadvantage under which the visitors were playing in being without the services of star men, the Recreio adopted an entirely defensive policy and had their three half backs assisting the defence to the exclusion of the forwards and it was necessary for the Portuguese attack to drop back for the ball to initiate any movement.

On several occasions the forwards broke away and became an instant source of danger to the Lincolnshire defence but except for a few occasions the half backs were able to subdue all attacks. When necessary the full backs were always prepared for an emergency and there were indeed few opportunities given the Portuguese although three or four times the visitors were very near to scoring a surprise goal.

DETERMINED DEFENCE

The determined defence which was put up by the Recreio side was due in no small measure to the safety of R. Marques in goal and to the brilliance of Bowen at left back. The latter was the outstanding player on the field and was always an obstacle to the Lincolnshire attack. There was only one occasion when he was really beaten and then Malpas missed his shot for goal, allowing Marques to save without difficulty.

The half backs, inspired by the stubborn Bowen, concentrated entirely on defence and rendered invaluable support to the backs. They lay well back and gave the opposition few openings. They were always able to nip in and clear every time Higgins and Co. approached within reach of goal. More often than not the ball was cleared to a Lincolnshire man but the Recreio forwards received several quick passes from which they moved quickly down the line only to be stopped by the defenders.

Ash and Edmundson were always reliable and gave little away, the former being particularly sound. Reed in goal was never given a really anxious time although one or two shots went near to being converted. Campos, towards the end of the game missed an open goal in the same way as Malpas had missed the scoring for the Lincolnshire early in the first half.

Taken all round the game was scrappy and never reached a high standard of play. The football that was seen was certainly not a credit to the twenty-two players although there were one or two bright spots during the match.

BRITISH VICTORY IN S. AFRICA

ANOTHER DOUBLE FOR HOWLAND

Pretoria, Sept. 11.

The Oxford and Cambridge team of athletes, who are touring the Union, won another match here to-day, when they met the Transvaal and South African police in a triangular contest. The tourists won by one point from the Transvaal, with 13 points against 12. The South African police scored 5.

R. L. Howland (Cambridge University), captain of the British team, won the shot putt with 46½ lb. and the discus with 126ft. 6½ in. and has so far won every event during the tour in which he has competed.

E. Grimbeck, the South African sprint champion, won the 100yds. and 220yds. in 9.8sec. and 21.4-10sec. respectively.

A. G. K. Brown, the Cambridge University quarter-miler, beat A. W. Sweeney, the British Empire sprint champion, in the 100yds. and 220yds. and the discus with 126ft. 6½ in. and even time. In the 220yds. Sweeney could only get to within 2yds. of Grimbeck.

St. J. K. Sullivan won the half-mile by 7yds. from Lyell, of the Transvaal, in 1min. 57.2sec.

R. T. Snijders, the Oxford miler, finished fourth, 4yds. behind the South African mile champion, N. J. Wessels, who returned 4min. 21.4sec. to beat R. K. Jacobs (Police), the former Olympic runner, by 30yds.

Another English defeat was recorded in the pole vault, when J. Van Der Walt, of the police, vaulted 12ft. 3½ in. to 12ft. 11 in. by F. R. Webster, of Cambridge University, the Inter-University champion.

In the 120yds. hurdles, A. G. Plirow (Oxford University) knocked down three hurdles in finishing first in 16sec. dead and was accordingly disqualified. The race went to Lavery, of the Transvaal.

The next contest will be a Test match against South Africa on the famous Wanderers' ground on Saturday.

We have just unpacked a consignment of ALEX WHEATLEY'S Ladies' Clubs—steel shafted and beautifully light—exceptionally well balanced.

During our special Sale of Golf Clubs, these will be offered at $10.50!

They are really a joy to own and use.

AQUATIC SPORTS MEETING

BOY SCOUTS HOLD FUNCTION

NEW RECORDS

A remarkably high standard was reached during the annual aquatic sports of the Boy Scouts Association, held at the V. R. C. pool on Saturday afternoon. In the words of Mr. C. Champkin, the Acting Commissioner, "records were broken like egg shells."

Three new records were made in the first three events, while in the last race but one, Eddie Marques, the Interport swimmer, broke the fourth, winning the 100 yards Breast-Stroke (open to Rovers and Deep Sea Scouts) in the time of 77 seconds.

The 2nd. Hongkong Troop and Pack took the major honours, winning the Bird Challenge Cup for Scouts and the Alcock Cup for Cubs. The President's Cup (presented by the Hon. Mr. R. H. Kotewall, C.M.G., L.D.S.) went to the Sea Scouts the runners-up.

At the close of the events, Mr. Champkin made a few remarks about the excellent swimming, congratulating both winners and losers on their fine attempts, and called upon Mrs. Large to present the cups and certificates. Mrs. Large was vigorously cheered.

The detailed results follow:
25 Yards Junior Wolf Cub Race: 1, J. Tai; 2, J. Yvanovich. Time: 10 secs. (Record).
50 Yards Senior Championship: 1, J. Dudley; 2, Lee Ching Ling. Time: 27 secs. (Record).
100 Yards Junior Championship: 1, R. Marques; 2, Chan Kwai Kait. Time: 30 2/5 secs. (Record).
25 Yards Senior Wolf Cub Race: 1, T. Williams; 2, T. Bayot. Time: 16 secs. (Record).
100 Yards Senior Championship: 1, Ip Hon Chuen; 2, J. Dudley. Time: 65 1/5 secs.
Senior Wolf Cub Diving: 1, E. Wade; 2, T. Williams.
Junior Wolf Cub Diving: 1, T. Snooks; 2, L. Guterres. Time: 29-43 1/4.
A Bogey Competition will be held on the New Course at Fanning on Tuesday, October 22.

MISS ELIZABETH RYAN TURNS PRO.

WON SEVERAL DOUBLES CROWNS AT WIMBLEDON CHAMPIONSHIPS

(Special to "Telegraph")

Los Angeles, Oct. 6.

Following her recent retirement from amateur lawn tennis, Miss Elizabeth Ryan, probably the greatest woman doubles player, has now definitely turned professional.—United Press.

Last April Miss Ryan announced her intention of turning professional and since then she has not competed in any amateur competitions. A native of California, where she learnt the game, Miss Ryan won her first tournament of note in 1913 when she secured the singles title at Cannes.

She has won different tournaments since but although she has often competed at Wimbledon she has never succeeded in taking the much coveted singles crown. However, it was in doubles that she has excelled and no other woman has been joint title holder as many times as has Miss Ryan.

With Miss A. M. Morton she won the title in 1914 and then in partnership with Miss Lenglen from 1919 to 1923 the pair dominated the championships to take five consecutive titles in succession, there being no competition during the years of the Great War.

In 1925 Miss Ryan and Miss Lenglen again captured the title after having lost it the previous year to Miss Helen Wills and Miss Helen Jacobs. In 1928 Miss Ryan partnered Miss M. K. Browne to win her eighth title while the following year she and Miss Helen Wills won the final, which success the same pair repeated in 1930. Miss Ryan formed a successful combination with Mme. Mathieu during the two years, 1933 and 1934.

IN MIXED DOUBLES

In the mixed doubles event she was also successful on several occasions. She first won the title with T. G. Lycett in 1919 and again the same pair won the crown in 1921, 1922, 1923 and 1924. Her next success was with J. H. Crawford in 1930 and with E. Mader in 1932.

Only once, however, has Miss Ryan won the American doubles crown. This was in 1926 when she partnered Miss E. Goss, who had achieved two successes in the American Mixed Doubles Championship, first in 1924 with Jean Goddard and then in 1933 with H. Ellsworth Vines.

Among other major successes were her victories in the French Championships with Mrs. Helen Wills-Moody in 1930 and 1932 and Mme. Mathieu in 1933.

Miss Ryan has represented the United States in the Wightman Cup Championships.

For several years Miss Ryan was ranked among the world's best ten, her highest being in 1927 when she was third to Helen Wills and Senorita d'Alvarez.

SERIAL STORY

One I Love

by LAURA LOU BROOKMAN

CHAPTER XLIV

Rolf's voice came clearly over the wire. "Hello, Janet. This is Rolf. Have you seen Betty today?"

"No, I haven't."

"Oh," he seemed to hesitate. "I thought she might have dropped in to see her mother. Then you haven't heard anything more about the—necklace?"

"No. Mrs. Curtis talked to her on the telephone this morning. She promised to call if there was any news."

"I see." There was a pause and then the man went on quickly. "I tried to call Betty but I couldn't get her. Just wanted to know if they'd found out anything yet."

Janet said, "I guess they haven't." Her voice sounded flat and tired. She was very tired, though she wasn't aware of the fact.

"Listen, Janet, you mustn't worry. Nobody could really think you took the necklace?"

"Then you don't think that?"

"Why, of course not! Betty was just nervous and excited last night. She didn't know what she was saying. The police can't do anything to you."

"Oh, Rolf!"

"I'd have spoken up and told them it was ridiculous only—well, I thought it would make Betty more excited. Couldn't have helped any. When I see that detective again I'll tell him you couldn't have had anything to do with it."

Her voice was eager, trembling. "I wish you would! Maybe they'd believe you. They wouldn't believe anything I said."

She could not go on. She turned and pressed her hand to her forehead, so that Rolf would not know that she was crying.

"Janet!" he said. "Janet, listen—are you there?"

"Yes."

"There's something funny about your voice. It doesn't sound right. Now remember, there isn't anything for you to worry about. Those policemen are a bunch of dumbbells. All that talk of theirs doesn't mean anything. The whole thing will blow over!"

"But, Rolf, it can't! Not until they find the person who really took the necklace. You see, I don't feel until they do everyone will believe I did it."

"No, they won't believe it. Mrs. Curtis doesn't. And Betty won't either after she's calmed down. There's nothing for you to worry about."

"I hope not."

"Of course there isn't. Well, I'll have to get back on the job. By the way, if you hear anything would you mind giving me a ring? I'll be at the office."

"Yes, I'll call you."

"I'm just anxious to know that everything's all right."

Janet said goodbye and put down the telephone. Rolf's words had both cheered and frightened her. It was good to know he believed in her but if he were right about the police, if they failed to clear up the mystery, she knew she would never be free of this cloud of guilt. They could not prove she took the pearls but they would believe it. Everyone would believe it. Mrs. Curtis who was trying to pretend her suspicions had not been aroused. Betty, openly accusing. Those policemen and the others who might come for her at any minute.

"They've got to find them!" she told herself, gripping her hands together. "They've got to!"

She walked to the window and looked out. September sunshine fell on the lawn. Here and there were patches of shade and a faint breeze rustled the leaves of the trees. Outside everything was quiet, peaceful.

It would have been good to get out, to feel that warm sunshine, to walk and walk until weariness overtook her. Janet turned away quickly. She could not go out. This room with its luxurious furnishings was a prison and she was a prisoner.

She felt something beside her and looked down. Buster, the Persian cat, rubbed his arched back against her and looked up coaxingly. Janet stooped and picked him up. "What's the matter, Buster?" she asked. "I don't see that you have anything to complain of."

She rubbed his head and the cat, in response, raised his pink nose high in the air. Buster purred in deepest contentment. There was nothing whatever the matter so far as he was concerned.

Janet was sitting with the cat in her arms when Lucy appeared suddenly in the doorway. "Oh, Miss Hill!" she exclaimed. "Do you know what's happened?"

YOUNG SOCIETY MATRON REPORTS VALUED PEARL NECKLACE MISSING

"Does Mrs. Curtis know about it, do you suppose?"

Janet nodded. "Yes," she knows about it." The paragraphs below the picture gave a brief and somewhat garbled account of the loss of the necklace. They stated that Mrs. Carlyle had reported the disappearance of the necklace, worth $1,200, to police, that there were several "mystery angles" of the case, and that a suspect had been examined.

The name of the suspect, the newspaper said, "was withheld but it is understood it is a servant who had access to the apartment."

"Do they mean Marie?" Lucy asked excitedly. "She's the only one they could mean! My stars—"

"No, it isn't Marie," Janet told her quickly. "They think I took it."

"You?"

Janet's tone was flat and mechanical. "Yes. The police talked to

"Oh!" There was horror in Lucy's eyes. She had drawn back and stood staring at the other girl. "The police!" she repeated. "You mean they'll come here?"

"I guess so."

The maid continued to eye her with undiminished alarm. "Oh, this is terrible!" she exclaimed. "If the police come here what will I do?"

"I guess you'll have to let them in," Janet told her. She was tired now. Terribly tired. She felt beaten down and humiliated. Mrs. Curtis knew about it there was nothing more to hope for. They would print her name and probably her picture, being led away by the police.

"But why did you do it?" Lucy gasped. "Didn't you know you'd get caught?"

"I didn't look away. I didn't do it," she said, "but that doesn't seem to make any difference."

There was a step in the doorway and both girls turned. Mrs. Curtis was standing there. "What is it?" she asked. "Lucy, what are you so excited about?"

The maid pointed to the newspaper Janet held. "It's—that," she said. "About Mrs. Carlyle's necklace!"

Lucy's face turned red. Mrs. Curtis the newspaper. The woman uttered a low exclamation and then turned to Janet. "I want all the servants to come here at once," she said. "Tell them immediately."

Fifteen minutes later they trooped in—Frederick and Bertha and Lucy and lastly the cook. It was a grim meeting. Mrs. Curtis said that on no account were any of them to speak about the stolen necklace. No matter who asked they were to deny that they knew anything about it.

"The matter," Mrs. Curtis said, "is in the hands of the police. I do not want any more talk about it and I am particularly anxious to keep it out of the newspapers. If I hear that any of you have said anything about the necklace to anyone outside the house you will be discharged. That is all."

The maids and the cook and the chauffeur departed. Janet felt Lucy's eyes on her, and then saw her turn away quickly. Lucy, like the others, believed her guilty.

Mrs. Curtis left the room and Janet was alone again. Half an hour later she heard voices in the living room. Every muscle was taut but the girl remained motionless. It was Betty's voice and her mother's. She heard the voices rising and falling. They were talking about her, Janet knew. She could not hear what they said. There was nothing to do but wait breathlessly.

The sharp ringing of the doorbell brought the girl to her feet. Now! Now! They had come for her!

But there was no summons. A moment later Lucy, sitting through the hall like a frightened sparrow, opened the library door. "It's the police—the whippersnappers—"

NOTES FROM THE THEATRES

"The Crusades" is Cecil B. DeMille's fine picture. It is great entertainment from every angle and for every kind of audience and is scheduled to open at the Queen's Theatre soon. Its every problem of taste and policy, as well as drama and workmanship, has been intelligently met. Because of the tolerant attitude that guided the production, and because of the religious nature of the drama has been treated from the detached, semi-historical viewpoint, the picture is not likely to suffer in any spot of world market, not even in the realm of Islam against which the Crusades hurled themselves. No less majestic and spectacular than other grandiose DeMille works this one is the most warmly human of the lot, with a powerfully moving story to give it heart, beautifully played in a sort of regal triangle by Loretta Young, Henry Wilcoxon and Ian Keith. As a whole the picture moves forward with majestic pageantry and cumulative suspense, while individual scenes and intimate detail are poignantly developed by DeMille's best direction. Regal pomp, intrigue which threatens the crusaders unity, pageantry which dazzles, and the crushing impact of battles have never been so skillfully balanced that they never overshadow the simple love tale between Loretta Young, princess of Navarre, whom he makes his queen.

"The Informer"

In "The Informer" from which the RKO-Radio screen play was adapted, Liam O'Flaherty, the novelist, created a truly amazing. That character is Gypo Nolan, the primitive, Irish giant who is portrayed by Victor McLaglen and whose titanic downfall is the theme. The film will be shown on Wednesday at the King's Theatre.

Liam O'Flaherty has created out of Ireland's bitter revolution a quasi-fictional being who, stirred by desire, harrowed by fear, torn by remorse, exalted by illusions of grandeur, and haunted by superstition, provides for Victor McLaglen what that actor regards as the greatest role of his career. The characterisation has the virility of the sergeant in "The Lost Patrol," yet it is much broader in its dramatic scope, because of the love element vividly combined in it. "The Informer" was directed by John Ford, and in the strong cast are Margot Graham, Heather Angel, Preston Foster, Wallace Ford and Una O'Connor.

"Girls Please"

Sydney Howard gives what must be considered the greatest performance of his screen career in "Girls Please," which is now at the Star Theatre. In the role of Mr. Tramplesure, deputy headmistress of a girls finishing school, Sydney has the widest possible range for his deliveries. His comedy style is as deliberate and forced as ever, and he derives his laughs from his own rich characterization rather than from slick turns of speed or breath-taking escapades. Howard's performance reaches its high spots when he dons the matronly clothes of a gin-drinking, headmistress, and when he visits a local taproom and orders a mysterious drink known as a clothes-brush. These sequences will convulse any audience. Others prominent in the cast are Sybil Arundale and Edna Earle, while figuring as pupils at the school are a bevy of beautiful maidens forming a veritable feast for the eyes. A few of them—Dorothy Buller for one—look future stellar material to this critic. In all, "Girls Please" is a hilarious mixture of pantomime and clowning which should pack the Star to capacity.

"Black Fury"

First National has made an epic in this story of life in the picturesque coal fields "Black Fury" which delighted audiences at the Queen's Theatre last night. Though bleak and stark in its actual settings, the characters have a warmth and humanity that makes them always convincing. The familiar scenes of coal mining towns and, indeed, an entire coal mine were reproduced for this production with startling fidelity. Thrilling episodes follow tense situations in rapid succession as clashes between miners and thugs in the underground of an unscrupulous private detective agency occur. There are fierce mob battles in the streets of the town as well as in the depths of the mine. There is humour aplenty and colourful scenes such as the dance hall in which a real Hungarian orchestra plays as hundreds of Balkan horn men and women execute the dances of their native land. It would be unfair to future audiences to reveal the thrilling climax, or to outline in detail the episodes through which the miners learn of "Black Fury" reaches the heights of devotion and self-sacrifice. Never has Paul Muni given so stirring a performance. Always a master of make-up Muni becomes the character Joe Radok in the flash, Karen Morley who has the role of the sweetheart, retains the sympathy of the audience throughout and the two work together splendidly.

"George White's 1935 Scandals"

"George White's 1935 Scandals," a splendid sunburst of a spectacle, is having its long-heralded engagement at the King's Theatre. There's something new under the sun after all. This is it! It's hard to begin praising, when half a dozen different things clamor for instant mention. There's the story, first of all, rich and arresting. Then there's the brilliant all-star cast of singers, actors and dancers, each one fit to dominate a picture. What talent! There's Albee Faye, James Dunn, Ned Sparks, Lydia Robert, Cliff Edwards, Arlene Judge, Eleanor Powell, Emma Dunn, Bonny Robin and George White himself. Tunesome songs by Broadway's ace composers, and this 1935 issue, which starts where last year's edition left off. Glamour is lent by 200 talented beauties, each hand-picked by George White, in their 1,000 gorgeous costumes designed by Charles LeMair, who is so good that Paris couturiers give him commissions. The entire Fox Film was conceived, produced and directed by George White. "George White's 1935 Scandals" provides clean sparkling entertainment for every member of the family.

"Young Eagles"

There is no wild animal that campers in the jungle fear more than they do the puma. A member of the cat family, sometimes known as the panther, this creature makes up in agility what it lacks in ferocity and size. Its leaping ability is what renders it such a dangerous menace. For no matter how high shelter is built, one of these wild cats may spring up to it in the night and do untold damage before a revolver can be used. The methods of the Puma are graphically illustrated in "Young Eagles," a Boy Scout chapter film, the first sequence of which will be shown at the Alhambra on Tuesday and Wednesday. The heroes of this entertaining yarn—two American youngsters, forced, because of an airplane accident to shift for themselves in a Central American jungle—build sleeping quarters elevated on bamboo poles, at the top of which no animal can reach them. They retire only to be awakened by a shrill cry like that of a child or a woman in distress. Terror-stricken, they stare down into the gleaming eyes of a puma which, alternately crouching and springing, tries frantically to reach them. Unarmed, the boys have no alternative but to watch the creature until dawn. Pumas are but one of the wild jungle animals that render life exciting for these two young heroes. During their stay in the tropics they have encounters with bears, boa-constrictors, jaguars and crocodiles.

EUROPEAN WAR NOT LIKELY

WASHINGTON NOT APPREHENSIVE

FLIGHT OF CAPITAL

Washington, Oct. 5.
A European war is considered unlikely here.

The influx of European capital is strengthening American security markets and increasing the chances of credit inflation.

Efforts towards international currency stabilization have been postponed indefinitely.

President Roosevelt's changed attitude as a Presidential candidate is considered favourable to business.

A rising trend in business until April and higher corporation profits in 1936, with continued easy money, are to be expected.—Sloan, Culbertson and Fritz.

DISPUTE OVER COTTON GOODS

PROTEST AGAINST FORFEITURE

An application for the forfeiture of 135 cases of cotton thread on spools with "Horsehoe" mark, pursuant to Section 11 (2) of the Merchandise Marks Ordinance, was made before Mr. Macfadyen in the Central Police Court this morning by Mr. F. G. Nigel, appearing on behalf of the Central Agency, Limited.

Mr. J. T. Prior said he had been instructed by the China and South Sea Bank to show cause. The solicitors for the complainant had refused to give him any information regarding the matter. He would also like to know who the defendant was. The goods, he contended, had been wrongly seized and he now applied for their release. The goods had not been forfeited as yet.

Mr. Nigel stated the complainant, who swore the information on which his Warrant issued a search warrant, was Mr. D. J. Macadam.

Mr. F. E. Nash, appearing on behalf of the Iwa Yu Company, Shanghai, owners of the goods, associated himself with Mr. Prior's protest, against the goods being seized. He applied for an adjournment, as he expected his client from Shanghai.

Mr. Nigel: The goods are still in the godown.

Mr. Prior: An injunction could have been applied for, and not violent criminal proceedings.

Mr. Nigel: This has not come as a complete shock to the China and South Sea Bank. We have been in constant communication with them for the past fortnight.

The Magistrate adjourned the case until October 21, the goods meanwhile to remain in the godown.

AMERICAN NEUTRALITY GUARDED

Britain's position and her demand for quick and effective action; secondly, as setting an example to the League which will shortly start examining the question of sanctions; and, thirdly, will oblige the League to take equally strong measures, although only against the aggressor.

Britons are especially pleased at President Roosevelt's warning to Americans that they will trade with Italy at their own risk. This is considered most important as the embargo does not discourage cotton and other commodity exports, which are not included in specific bans.—United Press.

TWO PROCLAMATIONS

Washington, Oct. 6.
President Roosevelt has issued a second proclamation, following last night's declaration that a state of war is recognised in Ethiopia, and warns Americans that they will use the vessels of belligerent nations at their own risk.

Last night's general proclamation is expected to have far-reaching consequences.

It is not likely that the embargo against the belligerents which it presupposes will be extended to cover raw materials, even if they are used in the manufacture of war munitions, but with respect to Italy it will have possibly embarrassing implications.

Since Italy is a debt defaulter she is barred from obtaining credits and she can therefore only buy raw materials to the extent of her small cash bank credit.—Reuters.

HOPING TO END WAR IN AFRICA

LAVAL RE-OPENS CONVERSATIONS

THREE-POWER TALKS PLAN

(Special to "Telegraph")

(By Telegraph, Copyright, Telegraphia Magazine, October 7, 1935, 10.10 a.m.)

Paris, Oct. 6.
Despite Great Britain's rejection of Signor Mussolini's bid for direct Anglo-Italian contact and her insistence that the League of Nations should settle the Italo-Ethiopian problem, it is learned that M. Pierre Laval, the French Prime Minister, has resumed his efforts to effect an agreement with London and Rome.

It is stated authoritatively that M. Laval is week-ending in Auvergne and that he has had frequent telephone conversations with Signor Mussolini.

It is believed to be anxious to re-open three-power conversations.

M. Laval is said to have felt that the situation is now more favourable for a settlement of the Ethiopian dispute, now that Adowa has been captured and the Italian pride somewhat refreshed. He believes that the Italians felt they needed some prestige and that the Adowa victory may enable them to obtain concessions and end the war without loss of face.—United Press.

Suez Must Stay Open

CANAL COMPANY NEUTRALITY

GOVERNED BY CONVENTION

London, Oct. 6.
According to a convention, ratified with the signing of the Versailles Treaty, the Suez Canal cannot be closed to any nation nor blockaded.

The Suez Canal Company has issued a statement, accordingly, saying: "The company is a commercial firm and therefore neutral. That neutrality is recognised in concession acts. The canal must be kept open to all commercial ships."—United Press.

Under the Convention of Constantinople, signed in 1888, the Suez Canal was stated to be free and open in time of peace and war, without distinction of flag. The right to blockade was prohibited, and no act of war could be committed within the Canal or within a three-mile radius of the ports. Belligerent ships of war could only remain in the Canal or its ports a limited time.

The signatories to this Convention were Britain, France, Italy, the Netherlands, Russia, Spain, Austria, Germany and Turkey. Actually, the Canal has been partially closed on various occasions, notably for four days before the Battle of Tel el Kebir in 1882, while from 1915 to 1918 the Company surrendered its rights to the British and French Army authorities, neutral shipping being allowed to pass the canal after search for munitions and explosives outside the three-mile radius.

FAMOUS COMPOSER PASSES

SIR FREDERIC COWEN

London, Oct. 6.
Sir Frederic Cowen, the noted composer and conductor, died here to-day.

Born in Kingston, Jamaica, of English parentage, he studied in London, under Sir Julius Benedict and Sir John Goss, and at the conservatories of Leipzig and Berlin. He accompanied Her Majesty's Opera, 1871-77, conducting the Philharmonic Concerts, 1888-1892, was conductor of the Melbourne Centennial Exhibition, 1888-1889, succeeded the late Sir Charles Halle, as conductor of the Manchester, Liverpool, Philharmonic and Bradford concert, of the Manchester, Liverpool, Philharmonic Society in 1900.

He distinguished himself at musical festivals all over the country until 1924. His oratorio, Ruth, is one of his best known works, and among others of his

SERVANT WOUNDS EMPLOYERS

ALLEGED ATTACK WITH KNIFE

STRUGGLE IN KITCHEN

The story of how a servant stabbed his employers, Sanitary Inspector and Mrs. G. H. Sherriff, with a kitchen knife on Saturday morning, was told at the Central Magistracy this morning, when before Mr. W. Schofield, the servant, Chung Kwong, aged 46, was charged with wounding them at No. 11 Bay View Mansions, Causeway Bay.

Sub-Inspector C. Rozesky stated that defendant was employed by the complainants as a houseboy and cook at a wage of $23 a month, and had been in their service for a little over two months. On September 30, Mrs. Sherriff had delivered to the house a quarter of a ton of coal from the Hop Hing firm, and as she had no change to pay, she said she would pay the money, $3.75, later. That same day she gave the defendant $3.75 and the bill, and asked him to settle it.

On Saturday she asked the defendant whether he had paid the bill, and he said he had not. She then asked him what he had done with the money.

ADMITS GAMBLING

Defendant replied that he had gambled it and had also gambled away his wages. She then asked him to go and find the money, and after an argument, the defendant left. He returned about noon, and she heard him coming up the back stairs talking aloud. She got frightened and locked the kitchen door. Mr. Sherriff returned home about 12.45 p.m., and she then told him what had happened.

Mr. Sherriff went into the servants' quarters and questioned the defendant, who produced $3.75 after some argument, and also produced the bill. Mr. Sherriff then told him he would have to leave, at which the defendant asked for five days' pay. Mr. Sherriff told him that could be settled at the Bay View Police Station. While he was talking, the defendant made for the kitchen table and snatched the drawer. Mr. Sherriff, anticipating something, caught hold of him by the back of his shoulders.

BOTH STABBED

At the same time, Mrs. Sherriff came to her husband's assistance, and caught hold of the defendant's left arm as he had a knife in his hand. The defendant made a lunge at her, and wounded her in the abdomen, and then he made a blow at Mr. Sherriff, also wounding him. Mr. Sherriff tried to force him to drop the knife, and in doing so slipped and fell. The defendant ran away towards the French Hospital, and was arrested by Mr. Bolt, of the P.W.D. The defendant told the police he had thrown the knife into a back lane, and although a search was made for it, it was not recovered. Mr. and Mrs. Sherriff were later both examined by Dr. Thomas. Mr. Sherriff had a superficial cut on the left thigh, and Mrs. Sherriff had a superficial cut on the abdomen.

Evidence was then given by Mrs. Sherriff, after which the hearing of the case was adjourned until October 14 at 2.30 p.m.

RABIES DANGER
TWO MORE CASES OF DOG-BITE

Sergeant Freeman, of the Royal Welch Fusiliers, has reported to the police that while walking near Scandal Point yesterday, he was bitten on the leg by a dog, which was being led by Mrs. E. Foley, Warrant Officers' Quarters, Murray Barracks. Freeman was treated at the Military Hospital, and the dog sent to Kennedy Town for observation.

Mr. J. R. Sutor, of 254 Prince Edward Road, reports that a stall

fokt, Mak Kan, who had come to deliver fruit, was bitten by his dog. The man was treated at the Kowloon Hospital, and the dog sent to Ma Tau Kok for observation.

Wong Chung, 45, coolie, was discharged by Mr. Wynne-Jones at the Kowloon Magistracy this morning when he appeared on remand charged with the larceny of a gold wrist watch belonging to Mr. D. Lopes, of No. 21 Granville Road on October 2 and with attempting to pawn it at the Wing Yik Pawnshop. Detective Sergeant R. Davies stated that enquiries revealed that defendant had actually redeemed the watch at the Yau Hing pawnshop.
